

Comic empires

IMPERIALISM IN CARTOONS, CARICATURE,
AND SATIRICAL ART

Edited by Richard Scully and Andrekos Varnava

MANCHESTER
UNIVERSITY PRESS

CONTENTS

List of figures—page vii
List of contributors—xvi
Acknowledgements—xxi

- 1 Introduction: the importance of cartoons, caricature, and satirical art in imperial contexts 1
Richard Scully and Andrekos Varnava

PART I – High imperialism and colonialism

- 2 Courting the colonies: Linley Sambourne, Punch, and imperial allegory 31
Robert Dingley and Richard Scully
- 3 ‘Master Jonathan’ in Cuba: a case study in colonial Bildungskarikatur 66
Albert D. Pionke and Frederick Whiting
- 4 ‘The international Siamese twins’: the iconography of Anglo-American inter-imperialism 92
Stephen Tuffnell
- 5 “‘Every dog” (no distinction of color) “has his day””: Thomas Nast and the colonisation of the American West 134
Fiona Halloran

PART II – The critique of empire and the context of decolonisation

- 6 The making of harmony and war, from New Year Prints to propaganda cartoons during China’s Second Sino-Japanese War 161
Shaoqian Zhang
- 7 David Low and India 192
David Lockwood
- 8 Between imagined and ‘real’: Sarukhan’s al-Masri Effendi cartoons in the first half of the 1930s 216
Keren Zdafee

CONTENTS

- 9 The iconography of decolonisation in the cartoons of the Suez Crisis, 1956 242
Stefanie Wichhart
- 10 Punch and the Cyprus emergency, 1955–1959 277
Andrekos Varnava and Casey Raeside

PART III – Ambiguities of empire

- 11 Outrage and imperialism, confusion and indifference: Punch and the Armenian massacres of 1894–1896 305
Leslie Rogne Schumacher
- 12 Ambiguities in the fight waged by the socialist satirical review Der Wahre Jacob against militarism and imperialism 334
Jean-Claude Gardes
- 13 The ‘confounded socialists’ and the ‘Commonwealth Co-operative Society’: cartoons and British imperialism during the Attlee Labour government 362
Charlotte Lydia Riley
- 14 Australian cartoonists at the end of empire: no more ‘Australia for the White Man’ 393
David Olds and Robert Phiddian

Index—426