

A Confusion of the Spheres

Kierkegaard and Wittgenstein on Philosophy and Religion

GENIA SCHÖNBAUMSFELD

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Acknowledgements	viii
Introduction	1
1. Kierkegaard's Influence on Wittgenstein's Thought	10
Introduction	10
I Testimonial Evidence	13
II References to Kierkegaard in Wittgenstein's Writings	22
Conclusion	35
2. The Point of Kierkegaard's and Wittgenstein's Philosophical Authorship	37
Introduction	37
I Parallels in Kierkegaard's and Wittgenstein's Conception of Philosophy	38
II Objections to a 'Symmetrical' Reading	59
Conclusion	83
3. Sense and Ineffabilia—Kierkegaard and the Tractatus	84
Introduction	84
I Conant's Reading of the Tractatus	87
II A Critique of Conant's Reading of the Tractatus	93
III Interim Conclusions	118
IV Conant's Reading of the Postscript	119
V A Critique of Conant's Reading of the Postscript	123
VI Interim Conclusions	138
VII Kierkegaard and the Mysticism of the Tractatus	139
Conclusion	151
4. A Confusion of the Spheres—Kierkegaard's and Wittgenstein's Conception of Religious Belief	156
Introduction	156

I	The 'Target View' of Religion	157
II	A Critique of the 'Target View': The Kierkegaard-Wittgenstein Conception	159
III	Objections to the Kierkegaard-Wittgenstein Conception	175
	Conclusion	195
	Conclusion	197
	Select Bibliography	202
	Index	211