

Seneca

Letters on Ethics

To Lucilius

TRANSLATED WITH AN INTRODUCTION
AND COMMENTARY BY MARGARET
GRAVER AND A. A. LONG

Seneca and His World / ix

Introduction to the Letters on Ethics / i

Letters on Ethics

- 1 Taking charge of your time / 25
- 2 A beneficial reading program / 26
- 3 Trusting one's friends / 27
- 4 Coming to terms with death / 29
- 5 Our inward and outward lives / 31
- 6 Intimacy within friendship / 33
- 7 Avoiding the crowd / 34
- 8 Writing as a form of service / 37
- 9 Friendship and self-sufficiency / 40
- 10 Communing with oneself / 44
- 11 Blushing / 46
- 12 Visiting a childhood home / 48
- 13 Anxieties about the future / 52
- 14 Safety in a dangerous world / 55
- 15 Exercises for the body and the voice / 59
- 16 Daily study and practice / 62
- 17 Saving for retirement / 64
- 18 The Saturnalia festival / 67
- 19 The satisfactions of retirement / 70
- 20 The importance of being consistent / 72
- 21 How reading can make you famous / 75
- 22 Giving up a career / 79
- 23 Real joy is a serious matter / 82
- 24 Courage in a threatening situation / 85
- 25 Effective teaching / 90
- 26 Growing old / 92
- 27 Real joy depends on real study / 94
- 28 Travel is no cure for depression / 96

- 29 A disillusioned friend / 98
30 An Epicurean on his deathbed / 102
31 Our mind's godlike potential / 105
32 Steadiness of aim / 108
33 The use of philosophical maxims / 109
34 Willingness is the key / 112
35 Learning to be a friend / 113
36 Helping another maintain his commitment / 114
37 Service to philosophy is true freedom / 117
38 Fewer words achieve more / 118
39 Healthy and unhealthy desires / 119
40 Oratory and the philosopher / 120
41 God dwells within us / 123
42 Good people are rare / 126
43 Being the subject of gossip / 128
44 Noble birth / 129
45 A gift of books / 130
46 A book by Lucilius / 133
47 How we treat our slaves / 134
48 Tricks of logic / 138
49 Remembering old times / 141
50 Blindness to one's own faults / 144
51 The party town of Baiae / 146
52 Good learners and good teachers / 149
53 A bad experience at sea / 153
54 A near-fatal asthma attack / 155
55 Passing the home of a recluse / 157
56 Noisy lodgings above a bathhouse / 159
57 A dark tunnel / 163
58 A conversation about Plato / 164
59 Steadiness of joy / 172
60 Our prayers are all amiss / 177
61 Preparing for death / 178
62 Living the inner life / 179
63 Consolation for the death of a friend / 180
64 Our predecessors in philosophy / 183
65 Some analyses of causation / 185
66 All goods are equal / 190

- 67 All goods are choiceworthy / 201
 68 The uses of retirement / 204
 69 Combating one's faults / 207
 70 Ending one's own life / 209
 71 Life's highest good / 214
 72 Finding time for study / 222
 73 Gratitude toward rulers / 225
 74 Only the honorable is good / 228
 75 What it means to make progress / 236
 76 Some proofs that only the honorable is good / 239
 77 Facing death with courage / 246
 78 Coping with bodily pain / 251
 79 A trip around Sicily brings thoughts of glory / 257
 80 A quiet day at home / 261
 81 Gratitude for benefits received / 264
 82 Syllogisms cannot make us brave / 271
 83 Heavy drinking / 277
 84 The writer's craft / 284
 85 Some objections to Stoic ethics / 287
 86 The rustic villa of Scipio Africanus / 295
 87 Poverty and wealth / 300
 88 The liberal arts / 309
 89 The divisions of philosophy / 319
 90 The beginnings of civilization / 324
 91 A terrible fire at Lyon / 336
 92 What we need for happiness / 341
 93 A premature death / 349
 94 The role of precepts in philosophy / 351
 95 The role of general principles / 367
 96 Complaints / 382
 97 A trial in the time of Cicero / 383
 98 The power of the mind / 386
 99 Consolation for the death of a child / 390
 100 A book by Papirius Fabianus / 397
 101 A sudden death / 401
 102 Renown and immortality / 404
 103 Those we meet may be dangerous to us / 410
 104 Why travel cannot set you free / 412

- 105 How to avoid being harmed by other people / 419
106 The corporeal nature of the good / 421
107 An unexpected misfortune / 423
108 Vegetarianism and the use of literature / 426
109 Mutual aid among the wise / 434
110 False fears and mistaken ideas of wealth / 438
111 What we lose with our tricks of logic / 442
112 A difficult pupil / 443
113 Is a virtue an animate creature? / 444
114 A debased style of eloquence / 451
115 Fine language will not help us / 457
116 The Stoic view of emotion / 462
117 Propositions and incorporeals / 464
118 A proper definition for the human good / 472
119 Natural wealth / 475
120 How we develop our concept of the good / 479
121 Self-awareness in animate creatures / 484
122 The hours of day and night / 489
123 Resisting external influences / 493
124 The criterion for the human good / 497
Fragments of other letters / 503

Notes / 505

Textual Notes / 581

References / 583

Index / 589