

East Asian Development Model

Twenty-first century perspectives

Edited by

Shiping Hua and Ruihua Hu

Contents

List of figures	xiii
List of tables	xiv
Notes on contributors	xv
Acknowledgments	xx

PART I

Theoretical perspectives 1

1 Introduction: the East Asian Development Model 3

SHIPING HUA

2 Need for a paradigm change for the East Asian economy 10

YOON-SHIK PARK

PART II

The Republic of Korea 19

3 The use of nationalist ideology in the economic development of South Korea: implications for the East Asian Development Model 21

CHANGZOO SONG

4 Democratic development and authoritarian development compared: South Korea 44

HYUG BAEG IM

5 Japan–South Korea economic ties: stability and growth through discord 77

TERENCE ROEHRIG

PART III

Japan	99
6 The development of Japan's developmental state: stages of growth and the social costs of energy and export promotion policies	101
BRIAN WOODALL
7 A tale of two capitalisms: developmentalism, neoliberalism, and the Japanese postal system	121
PATRICIA L. MACLACHLAN
8 The political economy of digital television transition in Japan and the United States: how well can a coordinated market economy solve a coordination problem?	136
HENRY LAURENCE
PART IV
The People's Republic of China	155
9 The Beijing consensus, the world capitalist system, and the limits of globalization	157
PETER MOODY
10 China's development path: joys and worries	177
WEIXING (MARK) CHEN
11 Two models of economic development in China	195
KATE ZHOU AND STEPHEN ZIERAK
12 Rule by virtue, the mass line model, and cadre–mass relations	217
JOHN KENNEDY AND SHI YAOJIANG
13 Beyond win–win: rethinking China's international relationships in an era of economic uncertainty	234
BRANTLY WOMACK
Index	253