

Contents

List of Maps	viii
Acknowledgements	ix
1. The Instruments of International Relations: Armies and Navies	1
War: part of the natural order	1
The lack of clear definitions	4
War: seldom decisive	6
Armies and recruiting	11
Artillery and fortifications	17
The legacy of the past	24
War at sea	26
Privateering and private initiative	27
2. The Instruments of International Relations: Trade and Finance	32
The limits of economic warfare	32
Finance and international relations	36
American silver and Spanish power	46
The rise of Dutch power	49
3. The Instruments of International Relations: Diplomats and Diplomacy	52
The origins of modern diplomacy	52
Eastern Europe lags behind	55
The diplomat and his problems	58
Ceremonial and precedence	64
The balance of power	67
4. The Birth of Valois–Habsburg Rivalry, 1494–1529	69
The preliminaries to the invasion of 1494	69
The invasion and its results	76

	The second French invasion: Spain becomes a major player	79
	The attack on Venice	82
	Francis I and Charles V: the first trials of strength	88
	New struggles: Pavia and its results	93
	From Pavia to Cambrai	95
5.	The Empire of Charles V and Its Enemies, 1529–59	102
	Charles faces new tasks: infidels and heretics	102
	New struggles but no decision, 1536–44	110
	The struggle takes on new dimensions, 1544–47	117
	More conflict in Italy: the imperial position in Germany collapses, 1547–52	122
	The Habsburg inheritance, the abdication of Charles V and the Treaty of Cateau-Cambrésis, 1552–59	127
6.	Spanish Power and Resistance To It, 1559–85	139
	Religion and politics in a changing world	139
	England and Scotland	143
	The wars of religion in France	146
	The Netherlands revolt begins	150
	The Netherlands revolt takes root	158
	France nullified by civil war	163
	Spanish greatness at its height: the conquest of Portugal	169
	Spanish progress in the Netherlands, growing disunity in France	172
	The English challenge to Spanish power	175
7.	Spanish Power Checked but Unbroken, 1585–1609	179
	The turning-point?: The Armada of 1588	179
	The crisis in France and the accession of Henry IV	183
	The Anglo-French-Dutch war with Spain to 1598	191
	The last stages of the struggle, 1598–1609	197
8.	Approach to Conflict, 1609–18	205
	German weakness and the Jülich-Cleves question	205
	The death of Henry IV: a breathing-space for Spain	209
	The approach to the Thirty Years War	212

9.	The Ottomans and Europe	218
	The threat from the east	218
	A colossus with feet of clay	223
	The Turk as outsider	228
	The growing threat, 1494–1529	231
	The threat at its height, 1529–66	238
	The beginnings of Ottoman decline	243
	Corsairs in the Mediterranean, stalemate on the Danube	248
10.	Eastern and Northern Europe: The Russian Advance	252
	A new power takes shape	252
	The new state advances	258
	The struggle for Livonia	264
	Contacts with the west slowly expanding	269
	Exhaustion and collapse in Russia	271
	Chronology	279
	For Further Reading	286
	Maps	299
	Index	308

List of Maps

1	Europe in 1519	300
2	Italy in 1559	302
3	The Netherlands in 1609	304
4	The Ottoman Empire, 1481–1566	305
5	Russia and eastern Europe, 1462–1584	306
6	Livonia, 1558–83	307