

Anxiety

A Philosophical History

BETTINA BERGO

OXFORD
UNIVERSITY PRESS

Contents

Acknowledgments	xiii
List of Abbreviations	xv
Introduction—Anxiety: A Philosophical History	1
I.1. An “Age of Anxiety” and the “Age” of Anxiety	1
I.2. The Debated Role of an Affect in Spirit and Reason: From Kant to Kierkegaard	5
I.3. Will and Representation: Anxiety Erupts in Post-Kantian Philosophy	8
I.4. Darwin’s Original Semiosis: An Argument for the Universality of Emotion	12
I.5. Nietzsche and the Sur-Resurrection: From Noumenal Will to Wills as Force	16
I.6. Freud’s Three Anxieties: Neurological, Ideal, and Originary	19
I.7. Husserl’s Phenomenological Foundations of the Ego, Time, and the Affects	22
I.8. Heidegger: Care and Angst and the Problem of Dasein’s Embodiment	25
I.9. Levinas and the Anxiety of Intersubjective Origins	30
I.10. Finis Initii : Toward an Incipient Synthesis	33
1. The New Philosophy: Kant’s Transcendental Revolution and the Fate of Emotions in German Philosophy	36
1.1. Introductory Remarks	36
1.2. Before Kant’s “Copernican Revolution”: Dilemmas in the Heritage of the Cogito	40
1.2.1. Cartesian Dualism and the Two Sides of the Ego	40
1.2.2. Locke’s Reintegration of Sensation and His “Simple Ideas”: New Dilemmas	43
1.2.3. Kant’s Transcendental Critique of the Soul	46
1.3. A “Soul” Divided: Unknowable in the Paralogisms of Pure Reason, Essential Postulate for Practical Reason	49
1.3.1. Practical Reason, Freedom, and the Soul: A Practical Dilemma	51

1.4. Schwärmerei and the Genesis of the First Critique	53
1.4.1. From the “Dreams” to the Parallogism of Personality: Unity and Representations	53
1.4.2. The First Parallogism of Substance (The Problem of Unity)	55
1.4.3. “The Soul Endures over Time; Therefore It Is a Person”: The Third Parallogism of Personality	59
1.5. Kant’s Cradle: The Self in Time and Steel	63
1.6. The Problem of Memory: “When I Am Conscious of Myself, I Am Then Conscious of Myself”	68
1.7. The “Reality” of Sensibility: Intensive Magnitudes	70
1.8. Conclusion: Anxiety as Theme, Anxiety as Symptom	72
Excursus 1. From Kant to Hegel via Philippe Pinel	77
E1.1. Introductory Remarks	77
E1.2. Kant, Madness, and the Passions	77
E1.3. Hegel, Reader of Pinel and French Revolutionary Psychiatry	85
E1.4. From Kant to Hegel via Pinel	94
2. Anxiety, Freedom, and Evil: Schelling and Groundless Life	97
2.1. Introductory Remarks: Infusing “Life” into Idealism	97
2.2. Anxiety as the Original Tension in the Birth of Nature: Schelling’s Path	102
2.3. Life Erupts in the Philosophical Inquiries into the Nature of Human Freedom (1809)	105
2.4. Vitalizing Being: How an Individual Is Both Particular and Universal	109
2.5. Leading Germans “Back to the Heart”: The Living Will and Its Affective Signs	112
2.6. Schelling’s Hupokeimenon and God’s First E(x)motion	116
2.7. The Mood That Re-flects (das Ebenbild Gottes)	119
2.8. The Positive Philosophy of Freedom and Evil: Kabbalah, Not Manichaeism	121
2.9. Anxiety and Love: The Struggle and Return	123
2.10. Return to the Groundless (Ungrund): Love as Adelon	126
2.11. Conclusion: Positive Philosophy of That Which-Will-Be	128
2.12. Aftermath	132

3. The Dialectics of Affect: Anxiety and Despair in Kierkegaard	133
3.1. Introductory Remarks	133
3.2. Kierkegaard's Path to The Concept of Anxiety	136
3.3. The "Mythology" of Sin and Sinfulness	141
3.4. The Evolution of Freedom and Possibility	145
3.5. The Dialectic of Anxiety: Intimations of Freedom and Guilt, Signs of Spirit	149
3.6. Anxiety over Evil, Anxiety over the Good: "Every Life Is Religiously Designed"	153
3.7. Toward Redemption: Myth against Systems, Particularity against Universalism	156
3.8. The Sickness unto Death (1849): Anxiety's Ultimate Dialectic	160
3.9. Wanting to Be Someone Else, Wanting to Be Oneself: The Dialectic of Affective Intensification	162
3.10. Myths and the Knowledge of Anxiety	166
3.11. Coram Deo (in the Presence of God): From Anxiety to Despair in Protestantism	169
3.12. Conclusion: On Kierkegaard's Dialectic of Affects	173
Excursus 2. The Universality of Emotions? Darwin's The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals (1872)	175
E2.1. Introductory Remarks	175
E2.2. Darwin's Context	177
E2.3. Monogenism versus Polygenism, Adaptation versus Struggle	180
E2.4. The Expression of the Emotions: Darwin's Four Difficulties	184
E2.4.1. Lamarckian Adaptation as Contrasted with the Survival of the Fittest	185
E2.4.2. Expression as Communication versus Expression as the Spontaneous Externalization of Mental States (Including Anxiety)	189
E2.4.3. Science Understood as Hypothesis and Observation versus Science as Ideology	192
E2.4.4. True Instincts and Habit-Created Instincts	195
E2.5. Conclusion	198
4. Schopenhauer, "Life," and the Affects of the Noumenal	201
4.1. Introduction	201
4.1.1. Life, the Heart of Schopenhauer's Thought	201
4.1.2. Taxonomy and "Plastic Forces"	203
4.1.3. Science and Philosophy on "Life": Systems and Foundations	204
4.2. German Natural Science and the Pantheism Controversy	208

4.3. Monism and Dual-Substance Philosophies: The Debate over Spinoza	212
4.4. Schelling, the Philosophy of Nature, and the Metaphysics of Self-Organizing Systems	217
4.5. Schopenhauer's Metaphysical (Un)ground of Life	222
4.6. Parricides and Paternities, Acknowledged and Unacknowledged	228
4.7. Schopenhauer, Life, and the Affects of the Noumenal	235
4.8. Conclusion	240
5. Nietzsche and the Intensification of the Dialectic of Anxiety: Mourning and Transvaluation	243
5.1. Introductory Remarks	243
5.2. The Body Philosophizes	245
5.3. Ressentiment as Anxiety	250
5.4. Nietzsche's Dialectic of Anxiety: After the Death of God, the Birth of Evil	253
5.5. Transvaluations: How Many, Ultimately?	255
5.6. The Logic of the Hōs mē (ὡς μὴ), or "As If Not": Free from Anxiety?	257
5.7. The "Weight" of the Cross: Hegel and Nietzsche on the Death of God	261
5.8. The Work of Mourning and the Restructuring of Time as Moment	266
5.9. Conclusion: Toward the "Highest Feeling" as a Response to Mourning	272
6. Freud and the Three Anxieties	275
6.1. Introductory Remarks	275
6.1.1. The Origin and Persistence of Neurology	275
6.1.2. In the Steps of Charcot: Encounters between Neurology and Psychology	277
6.2. Anxiety Neurosis and the Mind-Body Problem	281
6.3. The Project for a Scientific Psychology (1895) and the Neurological Ground of Anxiety	286
6.4. From Neurology to a Psychoanalytic Conception of the Unconscious	290
6.5. Anxiety in the Metapsychology	298
6.5.1. The Innovations in the Ego and Its Drives	298
6.5.2. The Circle of Anxiety	300
6.5.3. The "Economic Problem of Masochism" and the Fusion-Defusion of the Drives	306
6.6. Inhibitions, Symptoms and Anxiety (1926): Toward a New Foundation in the Trauma of Birth	308
6.6.1. Confronting Otto Rank's Fallacies	311
6.6.2. Anxiety between Danger-Object and Symptoms	314

6.7. Conclusion: Birth Trauma and the Ego as "Quasi-Transcendental" Postulates	317
Excursus 3. Husserl: The Problem of Affective Forces, Einführung , and a Phenomenological Unconscious	319
E3.1. Introductory Remarks	319
E3.2. From Static to Genetic Phenomenology	321
E3.3. Activity and Passivity in the Embodied Ego and "Its" Psyche	328
E3.4. The "Energy" of Psychic Affects and the "Reservoir" of Past Time	330
E3.5. The Problem of the Feeling of Affective Forces and Drives: Sensation and Sensibility	333
E3.6. The "Affection" of Angst	335
7. Heidegger I: Angst in Heidegger's Fundamental Ontology and the Debts to Husserl and Kierkegaard	339
7.1. Introductory Remarks	339
7.2. Heidegger's Critique of Affects, Time-Consciousness, and Passive Synthesis in Husserl	342
7.3. Care as the (Non)essence of Dasein	346
7.4. Heidegger's Debt to Kierkegaard	349
7.5. Three-Part Time, Three-Part Being in Heidegger	354
7.6. Angst: Anxiety or Anguish?	357
7.7. Conclusion	360
8. Heidegger II: Angst, the Temporalization of Dasein, and the Temporality of "Life"	361
8.1. Introductory Remarks: Freedom and Willing in Nietzsche and Heidegger	361
8.2. Can Dasein Be in Its World and Yet Be Alive?	367
8.3. The Organ and the Tool: Capacity and Behavior versus Utility and General Function	369
8.4. Eigentlichkeit versus Eigentümlichkeit : The Case of Animal "Ipseity"	375
8.5. Benommenheit in Uncanniness and In-an-Environment	377
8.6. Beings "and Nothing Besides": The Origin of Negation in Anxiety	379
8.7. Heidegger Strengthens His Position on Animal Being (1936)	384
8.8. "The Sojourn of the Gods"	390
8.9. Conclusion	392
9. Emmanuel Levinas and the Anxiety of Intersubjective Origins	397
9.1. Introductory Remarks	397

9.2. A New Multitude of Attunements to Being in On Escape (De l'évasion, 1935)	399
9.3. Redemption through the Other Person (1947)	404
9.4. Levinas's New Conception of the Subject: The Hypostasis (1947)	407
9.5. Anxiety as "Pre-synthetic" and Precognitive: Levinas versus Husserl	409
9.6. Anxiety and the Phenomenological Unconscious	416
9.7. Anxiety, Time, and "Life": Levinas Reads Bergson against Heidegger	422
9.8. "Pre-originary Susceptiveness"; or, The Saying (Dire) (1974)	426
9.9. Conclusion: On Anxiety, Trauma, and Melancholia	429
Conclusion	438
C.1. Kant's Transcendental Revolution and the Fate of Emotions in German Philosophy	441
C.2. From Kant to Hegel Reading Philippe Pinel	443
C.3. Anxiety, Freedom, and Evil: Schelling and Groundless Life	446
C.4. The Dialectics of Affect: Anxiety and Despair in Kierkegaard	448
C.5. The Universality of Emotions: Darwin's The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals (1872)	451
C.6. Nietzsche and the Intensification of the Dialectic of Anxiety: Mourning and Transvaluation	453
C.7. Freud and the Three Anxieties	455
C.8. Husserl and the Problem of Affective Forces, Einfühlung , and a Phenomenological Unconscious	459
C.9. Angst in Heidegger's Fundamental Ontology: The Debts to Husserl and Kierkegaard	465
C.10. Emmanuel Levinas and the Anxiety of Intersubjective Origins	469
Epilogue: Social Implications of the "Age of Anxiety"	472
Bibliography	479
Name Index	497
Subject Index	505