

Contents

|                                                                      |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| General Introduction                                                 | vii |
| Volume Introduction                                                  | xi  |
| Two Ways of Ontology in Modern LogicJohn Myhill                  | 1   |
| Frege's Hidden NominalismGustav Bergmann                         | 19  |
| A Paradox in Frege's SemanticsMilton Fisk                        | 42  |
| On Proper Names and Frege's DarstellungsweiseR. M. Martin | 51  |
| The Context Principle in Frege's PhilosophyMichael David Resnik  | 60  |
| Two Types of DenotationMontgomery Furth                          | 71  |
| Frege as a RealistMichael Dummett                                | 109 |
| Frege's Context Principle RevisitedMichael D. Resnik             | 123 |
| Frege's Alleged RealismHans D. Sluga                             | 139 |
| TruthMichael Dummett                                             | 155 |
| Frege as Idealist and then RealistMichael D. Resnik              | 180 |
| Frege on ThoughtsGregory Currie                                  | 188 |
| Objectivity and Reality in Lotze and FregeMichael Dummett        | 203 |

|                                                                                   |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Eternal ThoughtsPeter Carruthers                                              | 223 |
| Fregean ThoughtsHarold Noonan                                                 | 244 |
| Frege's Context PrincipleLeila Haaparanta                                     | 265 |
| Frege and VaguenessJ. van Heijenoort                                          | 279 |
| Objectivity and Objecthood: Frege's Metaphysics of JudgmentThomas G. Ricketts | 295 |
| Frege on TruthTyler Burge                                                     | 327 |
| ThoughtsDavid Bell                                                            | 386 |
| Acknowledgments                                                                   | 401 |