

Contents

List of Contributors	xiii
Foreword Roger Brown	xv
Preface	xix
Introduction Tracy B. Henley and Michael G. Johnson	1
Chapter 1
William James and His Principles Rand B. Evans	11
Life of William James to 1890	12
The Writing of the Principles	24
Chapter 2
New Light on the Origin of William James's Experimental Psychology Eugene Taylor	33
Bowditch, Putnam, and James	46
James Begins Teaching at Harvard	53
Implications for Psychology	55

Chapter 3

The Implications of James's Plea for Psychology as a Natural Science	63
Amedeo Giorgi

The Meaning of Psychology as a Natural Science in the Principles	64
Ladd's Review of the Principles	66
Responses to Ladd's Review	68
Implications of James's Plea for Psychology as a Natural Science for Contemporary Psychology	70

Chapter 4

William James and Gestalt Psychology	77
Mary Henle

Mechanism	78
Atomism	83
Associationism	87
Organization	92
Convergences	96
A Final Word	98

Chapter 5

William James on the Self and Personality: Clearing the Ground for Subsequent Theorists, Researchers, and Practitioners	101
David E. Leary

The Context of James's Psychology	102
James's Classic Chapter on the Consciousness of Self	106
James's Further Thoughts on the Self and Personality	112
Echoes and Influences	119
Conclusion	124

Chapter 6William James and Habit: A Century Later 139
John C. Malone Jr.

- Why was the Principles so Influential? 140
- On Originality 142
- James's Chapter 4: Habit 143
- Habit's History: From Memory to Mind 147
- Habit's Decline in Respectability 148
- Habit in the Theories of Thorndike and Watson 149
- Later Learning Theories and Habit:
 - More Than Simple Associationism 151
 - Connectionist Models: The "New" Associationism 155
 - Introductory Textbook Thinking and Its Influence 156
 - The Limitations of Connectionism 159
 - Beyond Associationism and Mind: James's Positivism 160

Chapter 7Association, Cognition, and Neural Networks 167
Herbert F. Crovitz

- Association and the Brain 172
- A Resolution of the Associative-Cognitive Wars 178

Chapter 8Imagination 183
Sohee Park and Stephen M. Kosslyn

- Conceptual and Philosophical Foundations 184
- Individual Differences 185
- Neural Underpinnings 190
- Conclusions 195

Chapter 9A Look Back at William James's
Theory of Perception 197
Irvin Rock

- James's Theory of Perception Summarized 197
- Some Initial Comments on James's Theory 200
- What Do We Now Know That James Did Not Know
About Perception? 204
- James on the Topic of Perceptual Constancy 216
- Progress in the Last 100 Years 223

Chapter 10

Space Perception and the Psychologist's
Fallacy in James's *Principles 231
Edward S. Reed

James's Theory of Space Perception 232
James on Unconscious Inference 234
Attack on Two-Step Theories 236
The Psychologist's Fallacy 238
Resume of James's Theory of Space Perception 241
Conclusion: The Meaning of the Psychologist's Fallacy for Modern Psychology 242

Chapter 11

Consciousness and Comparative Psychology 249
Ronald Baenninger

James and Method 250
Psychology and Animals 252
Morgan's Canon 256
A Return to Mind in Animals 259
An Epistemological Coda 264

Chapter 12

The Stream of Consciousness Since James 271
Howard R. Pollio

Contemporary Psychology and the Stream of Consciousness Since James 272
The View of Ordinary Consciousness
From Experimental Psychology 274
The View of Consciousness
From Psychoanalysis 278
The View of Consciousness From Literature and Music 279
The View of Consciousness
From Philosophy 286
Metaphors of Consciousness 291

Chapter 13

James on the Will 295
James Deese

What James Had to Say 297

James and the Shift to Motivation 303

James and the Philosophy of the Will 305

Author Index 311

Subject Index 319