

Contents

Dedication and Acknowledgments	ix
Preface	xi
Introduction: A New Rhetoric for Writing Teachers	1
A New Era for Writing Instruction	2
Composition in the Digital Era	8
The Work of the Digital-Era Writing Instructor	15
Composition Learning Outcomes	23
Working Conditions for the Digital-Era Writing Instructor	25
Audience for This Volume	26
Language Choices	27
Human Problems	28
Organization of This Volume	29
Conclusion	31

Part One

APPROACHING Composition in the Digital Era

1. Theorizing Composition and Communication	37
Why Should Literacy Educators Read about Theory?	38
A Thematic Rhetorical History and Theory	40
Conclusion	70
2. Humanizing Composition	72
Diversity and Inclusion	73
Access	76

Cultural Competence	88
Learner Backgrounds for Perceptive Teaching	99
Learning Preferences	104
Conclusion	105
3. Digitalizing Text, Purpose, and Genre	106
Composition Technologies	107
Alphabetic and Multimodal Texts	109
Composition Purposes	111
Exposition	113
Genres	118
Conclusion	135
4. Technologizing Composition Instruction	136
Evolution of Technology in Composition Classrooms	137
Digital Educational Modalities	140
Composition Instructional Environments	143
Composition Instructional Technology	150
Software Applications That Enhance Learning	157
Conclusion	160
5. Teaching Composition in Online Settings	161
Using Technology in Online Settings	162
Preparing to Teach in Online Settings	163
Using Technology in Composition Teaching and Learning Activities	168
Considering the Student	188
Student Access Needs	189
Grading in Online Settings	190
Teaching Multimodality in Online Settings	191
Reflection in Online Settings	192
Conclusion	193

---

6. Reading Composition	195
The Need for Critical Media Literacy	196
Learning to Read	199
Reading in the Digital Era	204
Plagiarism: A Reading Problem	209
Teaching Reading Strategically	215
Conclusion	220
 Part Two
TEACHING
Composition in the Digital Era
7. Composing Processes and Approaches	223
Composing Processes for Alphabetic and Multimodal Texts	224
Conclusion	255
8. Designing and Scaffolding Assignments	256
A Process for Designing Effective Assignments	257
What to Include in a Scaffolded Assignment	267
The Portfolio Assignment	280
Designing Effective Multimodal Assignments	287
Conclusion	295
9. Providing Response, Feedback, and Evaluation	297
Response and Feedback Guide Students' Composing Processes	297
Elements of Response	302
Peer Review as Evaluation	316
Reflection as Evaluation	317
Instructional Evaluation in Practice	319
Evaluating an ePortfolio	329
Conclusion	333

10. Promoting Effective Communication	334
Establishing the Classroom Environment	335
Effective Communication in Collaborative Groups	340
Creating Space for Productive Dialogue	345
Establishing a Respectful Learning Environment	347
Recognizing Ineffective Dialogue and Behaviors	349
Building Trust	355
Turning to Administration for Help	360
Conclusion	361
11. Supporting Students	362
Essential Support in a Contentious Age	363
Literacy Center Support	374
Conclusion	384
12. Imagining the Future of Composition	385
The Future: Language and Literacy Education	386
Conclusion	395
Notes on the Authors	397
Works Cited	399