

Table of contents

Acknowledgments	i
Note on references and translations	iii
Preface	iv
 Chapter One: Pleasure in the Beautiful and Judgments of Taste
Introduction	1
I: The two-acts view	6
II: The "key to the critique of taste"	20
Notes	42
 Chapter Two: The Harmony of the Faculties
Introduction	45
I: Problems with the psychological interpretation	47
II: Other problems	55
III: The "key to the critique of taste" revisited	68
IV: The subjective condition of cognition	74
V: The legitimacy of taste	88
Notes	97
 Chapter Three: The intersubjectivity of cognition
Introduction	102
I: Objective validity and intersubjective validity	105
II: Judgments of perception and judgments of experience	122
III: Human beings and empirical objects	144
Notes	166
 Chapter Four: Taste and reflective judgment
Introduction	171
I: Reflective judgment and the systematicity of nature	174
II: Reflective judgment and taste	192
III: The autonomy of judgment	202
Notes	223