

Contents

Maps and Tables	xiii
Romanization and Railway Nomenclature	xv
Abbreviations	xvii
Introduction	i
1 War, Opportunity, and Empire, 1904–1905	17
Meiji Imperialism: An Art of the Possible 20/ A War for the Open Door 30/ Volte-Face 36/ The Harriman Affair and the Manchurian Army 43/ The Russo-Japanese War as a Turning Point 54
2 The Trojan Horse, 1905–1907	60
The Inheritance: Russian Designs 61/ Japanese Adaptations 73/ Bureaucratic Turf Wars and the Origins of the South Manchuria Railway Company 86/ The Army, the Navy, and Manchuria 92
3 Managing Manchuria, 1907–1911	103
Defense and the Receding Danger of War 104/ Railway Diplomacy and Shifting Alignments 114/ The Business of the SMR 126/ Profits and Policy 139
4 The Chinese Revolution, the Taishō Political Crisis, and the Debate over Manchuria, 1911–1914	149
Japanese Imperialism and the Chinese Revolution 150/ Moderate Leadership and the Taishō Coalition 152/ Manchurian Initiatives Under the Taishō Coalition 160/ Whither Japanese Manchuria? 172

5	Imperialist Adaptations, 1914–1918	186
	The Twenty-One Demands and the Failure of Concession Hunting 187/ Imperial Policies of the “Korean Clique” 198/ New Strategies: The Nishihara Loans 207/ New Aims: Autarky 214/ The Fall of the Terauchi Government 223/
6	The Politics of Imperialist Compromise, 1918–1922	227
	Moderate Ascendancy and the Decline of Army Power 229/ The American Challenge and Japan’s Retreat in Manchuria 235/ Alternative Strategies: Industrial Manchuria 250/ Chang Tso-lin: Deus ex Machina 258
7	The New Diplomacy and the New Imperialism, 1921–1925	267
	Defense and Diplomacy, 1921–23 267/ Chinese Railway Initiatives 273/ Matsuoka Yōsuke and the “New Imperialism” 281/ The Railway Bargain of 1924 289/ Intervention, Escalation, and the “Invisible War” in North Manchuria 293/ Industrial Manchuria: Mixed Results 304
8	Troubled Partnership, 1926–1928	312
	Inflation, Railway Disputes, and the Deterioration of Relations with Chang Tso-lin 313/ The Second Eastern Conference and Critiques of Manchuria Policy 327/ Tanaka’s Attempt to Restore the Partnership 333/ The Assassination of Chang Tso-lin 344
9	The Sino-Japanese Railway War and the Manchurian Crisis, 1928–1931	349
	Tanaka Giichi and Chang Hsüeh-liang 350/ The Collapse of an Imperialist Middle Ground 354/ The Sino-Japanese Railway War, 1929–31 363/ The Making of a Radical Synthesis 377/ The Manchurian Incident 381
	Conclusion	389

Appendixes

A	Selected SMR Statistics	411
B	Population Statistics, Japanese Manchuria	414

Contents

xi

Reference Matter

Notes	419
Works Cited	481
Glossary of Chinese Place-names	507
Index	511