

CONTENTS

List of Tables
Preface
Acknowledgments

1.	INTRODUCTION	1
1.1	The question of freedom	1
1.2	The argument, the difficulties, the literature	6
1.3	Marcuse is a Young Hegelian	11
1.4	Marcuse is a Heideggerian	16
1.5	Marcuse is a member of the Frankfurt School	20
1.6	The approach further specified	24
1.7	Methodology and general outline of the study	27
	Notes.	31
2.	MARX, MARXISM AND HEIDEGGER. MARCUSE'S FIRST THEORY OF HUMAN LIBERATION	43
2.1	The context of Marcuse's first publications	43
2.2	The question of radical action	48
2.3	Heidegger and the path toward authentic existence	59
2.4	The first theory of liberation	61
2.5	The evolution of Marcuse's thought from 1928 to 1932	66
	Notes	67

3.	THE SECOND ENCOUNTER WITH MARX: MARCUSE'S NEW THEORY OF HUMAN LIBERATION	71
3.1	The method of Marcuse	72
3.2	Marcuse and the 1944 Manuscripts	76
3.3	From concrete philosophy to alie- nated labour	78
3.4	Ontology, human ontology and poli- tical praxis	88
3.5	The redefinition of human liberation	97
	Notes	102
4.	THE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY	107
4.1	The positive philosophy of a nega- tive philosopher	107
4.2	Liberalism, freedom and marxist tradition	113
4.3	The transcendence of alienation and true objectification	119
4.4	Marcuse and the good society	122
	Notes	131
5	THE IDEA OF THE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY IN THE THIRTIES AND FORTIES	139
5.1	The New York years	139
5.2	The analysis of labour	143
5.3	Reason and rationality	153
5.4	Happiness, individuality and affir- mative materialism	157
5.5	"Critical Theory" is a political theory	166
	Notes	169
6.	THE IDEA OF THE CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY IN THE LATE AMERICAN PERIOD	178
6.1	Marcuse and post-war America	178
6.2	Labour, work and play	185
6.3	A hedonist marxism	198
6.4	Art, culture and "la promesse de bonheur"	200
6.5	The rational society	209
	Notes	211
7.	FREEDOM AND THE DIALECTIC OF LIBERATION	221
7.1	Freedom in historical perspective	221
7.2	The identity of the subject and the object	231

7.3	The historical choice for the co-operative society	237
7.4	Criticisms and concluding remarks	240
	Notes	245
8	FREEDOM AND CONTEMPORARY CIVILISATION	248
8.1	Freedom and politics	248
8.2	Market freedom	257
8.3	Freedom and private life	262
8.4	Freedom and culture	266
8.5	Criticisms and concluding remarks	272
	Notes	274
9	CONCLUSIONS	279
	BIBLIOGRAPHY OF WORKS BY MARCUSE	289
	INDEX	301