

Contents

Preface	xiii
Introduction	1
“Let’s start with definitions”	3
Structure	7
Action → Conflict/Obstacle → Objective	7
We are narrative-seeking, storytelling animals	10
Action	11
Objective	12
Long-term and short-term objectives	16
Baymax in a shopping cart	17
Pursuing a negative objective	18
Acting and the CG pipeline	19
Animate the thought (acting is a process of exposing, not of hiding)	21
Willing suspension of disbelief and the Uncanny Valley	24
Regarding the animated documentary	27
Emotion	28
Empathy	32
Sympathy	35
Psychological gesture	38
Character rhythm	42
The audience	44
Who is your intended audience?	45
The 4th wall	48
Video reference	49
Storyboards vs. complete screenplays	51
Comedy vs. drama (intro)	52
Gags lack structure	58
Charlie Chaplin, Buster Keaton, Laurel & Hardy	60

Showreels	65
Character development	67
Heroes and villains	70
Video games	73
Empathy vs. agency in games	74
Cutscenes (animatics)	75
Humor	77
Non-player characters (NPC's)	77
Character design and narrative	78
A few more thoughts about blinking in games	80
Classroom notes	82
Scenes begin in the middle	82
Acting is doing. Acting is also reacting.	83
Blinking	84
Eyebrows	85
Animating dialogue	85
Status transactions	86
Power centers	88
The adrenalin moment	89
"MA"	91
Regarding those talking dogs in Pixar's movie UP	92
Experimental animation	93
Laban movement analysis	95
What does listening look like?	96
Pantomime	97
Anger and yelling	98
Punctuation in scripts	98
Crying	99
Drunk	99
My acting gift to you is surprise	99
A scene is a negotiation	100
Relationships are the way that characters feel about one another	102
Mirrors	102
A brief history of acting training (for actors)	103
Mocap	106
Animating aliens, robots and other non-humans	108

Film analysis	109
Flee	109
Grave of the fireflies	121
Soul	139
Porco Rosso	159
The Triplets of Belleville	178
“PSSSST . . . a few words, please, with animation teachers and mentors . . .”	196
Classroom exercises	197
Tightrope Exercise	198
Create a character profile	198
Open script exercise	199
The transformation game	199
Addendum	201
Walt Disney’s 1935 memo to Don Graham regarding how to train animators	201
Ed Hooks annotates animation master Glen Keane into “actor-ese” . . .	213
Ed Hooks annotates a section from the book The Illusion of Life	214
Conclusion	217
Becoming an artist	217
The future of animated storytelling	218
Acknowledgments	220
References	223
Index	225