

Contents

Preface and Acknowledgments	xi
Part I Starting Points	1
1 Religious Diversity and Comparative Theology	3
Diversity around Us	4
Diversity within Us	6
Comparative Theology as a Response to Twenty-first-Century Religious Diversity	8
Distinguishing Comparative Theology from Related Disciplines	9
Comparative Theology and the Academic Study of Religions	12
Comparative Theology and Interreligious Dialogue	13
Comparative Theology and the Theology of Religions	14
Comparative Theology Autobiographically Grounded	16
On the Limits of This Book	19
Looking Ahead	22
2 In Generations Past: Some Ancestors to Today's Comparative Theology	24
Comparative Theology and the Long History of Christian Interreligious Reflection	24
Western Jesuit Scholars in India	27
Comparative Theology as a Discipline (1699–)	30

A Moderate Criticism of Missionary Scholarship and the Older Comparative Theology	35
At the End of the Era	37
3 Comparative Theology Today	41
David Tracy	42
Keith Ward	43
Robert C. Neville	45
A Note on Raimon Panikkar	47
James Fredericks	49
New Directions	50
From Theory (Back) to Practice	52
Part II Doing Theology Comparatively	55
4 From Theory to Practice	57
The Practice of (Comparative) Religious Reading	57
Intelligent Reading	59
Commentary as a Religious Practice	60
Interreligious Commentary	63
Leaving Room for Other Readers and Their Readings	66
Necessarily Elite Choices	67
5 Getting Particular: A Christian Studies Hinduism	69
The Importance of Focus	69
(Self)Identifying This Particular Comparative Theologian	70
Making a Map, Marking the Field: Hinduism in Brief	70
Getting Particular: Mimamsa, Vedanta, and Srivaisnavism	74
Appreciating Similarities	75
Theistic Hinduism as a Useful and Comfortable Focus	77
Theology as a Hindu Discipline	78
Comparative Theology in Hinduism and Other Traditions	80

My Comparative Theology, Indebted to Hindu Theologies	83
6 “Learning to See”: Comparative Practice and the Widening of Theological Vision	87
Plenary Address at the Catholic Theology Society of America, 2003	88
Near a Goddess	88
Devi’s Beauty, Devi’s Pleasure	90
Rediscovering Mary	93
Mary and Her Son Jesus, through Muslim Eyes	96
Sojourner Truth’s Liberating God	99
All in Christ, but Still All	103
Vocation	105
After “Learning to See”	106
 Part III The Fruits of Comparison	 109
7 Theology After Comparison	111
Comparative Theology and the Larger Work of Theology	111
The Multiple Responsibilities of the Comparative Theologian	113
Some Theological Presuppositions Implicit in Comparative Theology	114
Comparative Theological Learning, in Particular The Imago Dei and Our Destiny in Bliss	117
What “Narayana” Might Mean for the Christian Encountering Goddesses	121
Comparative Theology and the Intensification of Devotion	123
Theology on a Smaller Scale	127
 8 “God for Us”	 128
“God for Us”: An Essay	128
A Verse, a Clue	129
What Hindus Thought about the Verse	130
Living the Verse	132

The Verse and Its Wider Context	133
An Aside on How to See God and on How God Wills to Be Seen	135
Noticing One's First Citizenship: Reflection on Ignatian Insight and My Home Citizenship	139
What Ignatius Had to Say	140
Some Contemporary Views of the Intensification and Emptying of the Imagination in the Spiritual Exercises	143
Multiple Religious Belonging, Human but Also Divine	146
"God for Us" as Comparative Theology	151
9 Comparative Writer, Comparative Reader	154
The Comparative Theologian Transformed	155
The Comparative Theologian as Marginal Person	157
The Comparative Theologian's New Community	160
Tasks and Opportunities for the Reader	162
Beyond This Book	164
Notes	166
Select Bibliography	172
Index	177