

Contents

Abbreviations	ix
Glossary	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii
I. Introduction	1
II. The Political, Economic, Social, and Religious Environment at the Time of Buddha	7
SECTION I: THE POLITICAL BACKGROUND OF BUDDHISM Monarchies, gaṇa-saṅghas and state formation – Khattiya clans and the gaṇa-saṅghas
SECTION II: ECONOMY AND SOCIETY AT THE TIME OF BUDDHA Expansion of agriculture – The second urbanization – Craft production and trade – The pattern of landholding – Emergence of a stratified society – Occupational groups and the process of tribal assimilation – The importance of kinship ties – Women in the Buddhist literature
SECTION III: THE RELIGIOUS MILIEU Philosophical speculation in the sixth century B.C. – Renunciation: the samaṇa tradition – Renouncers and householders – Samaṇas and brāhmaṇas – Brāhmaṇa as a normative term – Other sects at the time of the Buddha – Buddhism and other sects – The saṅgha – The bhikkhus and the laity – Dāna versus yañña – The laity's influence on the saṅgha – The new society and the phenomenon of renunciation
III. The Gahapati	65
Changing connotation of the term gahapati – The domains of power, religion and economy – Khattiya , brāhmaṇa and gahapati – The gahapati as an element of the king's sovereignty – The gahapati as controller of property – The gahapati as tax payer – The gahapati as associated with agriculture – The brāhmaṇa-gahapati – Gahapati, setṭhi, and setṭhi-gahapati – Gahapati as employer of labour – Gahapati as a status term – The gahapati's association with wealth – The gahapatis as extenders of popular support to Buddhism – The gahapati's special relationship with the saṅgha – Gahapati and gāmanī – Gahapati: from householder to agriculturist – The social organization of the gaṇa-saṅghas – Landholding in the gaṇa-saṅghas – Tension within the gaṇa-saṅghas – Two types of saṅghas – Some implications of clan ownership of land – Clan ownership of land, khattiyas and the gaṇa-saṅghas – The gahapati, the family, agriculture and the private control of land

IV. Social Stratification as Reflected in the Buddhist Texts 94

The problem – Buddhism and caste – Two schemes of categorization in the Buddhist texts – Terms of categorization – High and low strata in Buddhist texts – Regional dimension of stratification – The relationship of kula, kamma, and sippa – Empirical relevance of vaṇṇa, jāti, and kula – The Buddhist view of stratification: the saṅgha – Stratification outside the saṅgha – Principles of stratification based on kula, kamma and sippa – Evidence of stratification from Ceylon – The importance of the gahapati in the Buddhist view of stratification

V. The Social Background of the Early Buddhists 122

The problem – The method – The saṅgha – Social origins of important bhikkhus – Important bhikkhus of khattiya origin – The laity – The brāhmaṇa component of the laity – Important gahapati supporters of the Buddha – Other prominent supporters of the Buddha – Khattiya, brāhmaṇa, and gahapati: key figures in the Buddhist texts – Wealthy supporters of Buddhism – The importance of kinship ties in the extension of support to Buddhism – Analysis of the social composition of the early Buddhists

VI. The King in Early Buddhism 150

General ideas on kingship – The origin of kingship in the Buddhist genesis myth – Seven symbols of sovereignty – Despotic kingship at the time of the Buddha – Legitimate exercise of power – Arbitrary exercise of power – Normative kingship: the cakkavatti dhammiko dhammarāja – The creation of just social order – The king and the saṅgha

VII. Conclusion: Early Buddhism in a Historical Perspective	177
Appendices
A. Select List of Terms Depicting Various Strata in Early Buddhist Literature	182
B. List of Categories appearing in Early Brahmi Inscriptions	191
C. The Social Background of the Bhikkhus and Upāsakas	198
Bibliography	221
Index	231