

C O N T E N T S

List of Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
1. A Bible House in the City	7
2. From Civic Humanitarianism to Corporate Benevolence: The Changing Nature of the Board of Managers	35
3. Local Particularism and National Interests: Creating the Agency System, 1816–1830	62
4. The Limits of Consensus in a Capitalist Metropolis: The Problem of Mariners and “Papists”	89
5. The Limits of Consensus in a Christian Republic: Jacksonians, Baptists, Translators, and Abolitionists	118
6. “Motives of Both Duty and Expediency”: Entering the Foreign Field, 1831–1844	151
7. Making Agents Accountable: Bureaucratization and the Agency System, 1845–1865	175
8. Race, War, and Sectionalism: Reconstructing the Southern Agencies, 1850–1867	200
9. Bringing System and Order to the Agency: Bible Work in the Levant, 1854–1889	228
Epilogue: From “Missionary Basis” to “Business Basis”? Isaac Bliss’s Strange Lament	256
Index	263