

Contents

[INTRODUCTION]	4
----------------	---

SECTION ONE

CONJUGAL SOCIETY

Chapter 1. The nature of conjugal society

Article 1. The concept of the two natural societies structured for the unification of the human race, according to the Creator's plan	7
Article 2. The relationship between theocratic and conjugal society	8
Article 3. In its first institution, the human race was to have been a single, divine-human society	10
Article 4. In conjugal society there is a union common to all human beings and a union proper to the two sexes	11
§1. The first element of conjugal society, the fullness of union common to all human beings	12
§2. The second element of conjugal society, the fullness of union proper to the two sexes
A. Three kinds of inevitable variations in the condition of human bodies — first: natural defects which per se lessen the union; their remedy	23
B. The second kind of natural variations: accidental limitations of nature , which can lessen or increase the union	25
C. The third kind of difference: various conditions integral to human nature	27
Article 5. The union proper to the two sexes	27
§1. Three classes of affections of animal origin in the human being	27
§2. The nature of sexual union
A. Sexual union is an act of the soul	32
B. The union of the sexes is a mutual communication of life	33
§3. The ordering of marriage to sexual union is the specific difference distinguishing it from other unions	34

Article 6. Generation, effect of the sexual union	35
Article 7. Inconfusability of persons	35
Article 8. Conclusion	36
Chapter 2. The act placing conjugal society in being	37
Article 1. Conjugal society is placed in being through a contract	37
Article 2. The object of the marriage contract is not arbitrary, but determined by nature. It is the full union described above	38
Article 3. Nature of the consent forming marriage	44
Article 4. Distinction between marriage and the use of marriage	46
Article 5. The distinction between marriage and the fulfilment of marital obligations	47
Chapter 3. Christian marriage is a sacrament	48
Chapter 4. Necessary conditions for placing conjugal society in being
Article 1. Impediments in general	49
Article 2. Diriment impediments
§1. Diriment impediments which render the conjugal union null
A. Impotence	51
B. Relationship	52
I. Relationship in the direct line	52
a) The fact	53
b) Analysis of the fact	54
II. Relationship in the transversal line	60
III. Affinity	63
IV. Adoption	63
V. Spiritual relationship	64
§2. Impediments which render the contract null	65
A. Lack of ownership of what is alienated
I. Bond	66
II. Vow of chastity	66
B. Lack of knowledge of what is acquired	67
C. Lack of freedom	73
§3. Impediments which remove the matter of the sacrament
A. Lack of religious faith	74
B. Laws of the Church	75
I. Disparity of cult	80
II. Affinity and public decency	81

III. Clandestinity	82
IV. Crime	83
Chapter 5. Duties and rights of spouses	83
Article 1. The spouses considered as a single person and as two jural persons	84
Article 2. The double series of rights and duties of spouses: in- dividual and social	86
Article 3. COMMON and DISTINCTIVE rights and duties of spouses	86
Article 4. Common rights and duties	87
§1. Duties and rights concerning the conjugal union	87
A. Indissolubility
I. The triple reason for indissolubility	88
II. The nature and force of the triple indissolubility	89
III. The extent of the difference between the indissolubility of ratified and of consummated marriage	91
IV. Reprehensible customs contrary to indissolubility: concubinage and divorce
a) Concubinage	97
b) Divorce	103
V. The principles regulating the law on marriage in the Napoleonic Code	106
B. The unicity of the spouses
I. Marriage must be between one man and one woman
a) Demonstrated from the notion of marriage	122
b) Demonstrated by the analysis of the phenomenon of jealousy	123
c) Demonstrated by the duty of fidelity	126
II. Reprehensible practices opposed to the unicity of the spouses: polyandry and polygamy	126
III. Delicate feelings concerning the unicity of the spouses	129
C. Cohabitation	130
D. Community of acquired goods	130
§2. Duties and rights relative to the order befitting union	134
A. Duties of the spouses relative to the exercise of part of the union common to all human beings	135
B. Duties of spouses relative to the exercise of the union proper to them, that is, sexual union	136

I. Principal duties	136
II. Parents' influence on their offspring	136
Article 5. The distinctive rights and duties of spouses	141
§1. Summary of the rights and duties of spouses as equal but numerically distinct persons	142
§2. Distinctive rights and duties	143
A. The first title of prevalence of the husband: the feeling proper to man, but not woman, which urges him to be head of a line	144
B. The second title of prevalence of the husband: the proximate end of conjugal society, mutual satisfaction	151
§3. The nature of the husband's superiority and the wife's subjection	153
§4. The limits of the husband's superiority and of the wife's subjection	154
Chapter 6. The two systems which alter the relationships of superiority and dutiful subjection between spouses	156
Article 1. The principle of SERVITUDE considered in its relationship with domestic society	156
§1. Immoral effects of servitude before or outside marriage	157
§2. Immoral and unjust effects of servitude in marriage	159
Article 2. The principle of absolute equality considered in domestic society	162
Chapter 7. Sanction of the wife's rights in the state of nature	166

SECTION TWO

PARENTAL SOCIETY

[Introduction]	170
Chapter 1. The principle determining the jural relationships between father, mother and children
Article 1. The principle declared	171
Article 2. Application of the principle for determining the difference of patria potestas in the father and in the mother	171
Article 3. Application of the principle to determine the nature of patria potestas in general	173

Chapter 2. Limitations of patria potestas	176
Article 1. Patria potestas cannot harm the pure, formal rights of the child	176
Article 2. Patria potestas cannot take a child's life	176
Article 3. Patria potestas cannot sell a child as a bond-servant	180
Article 4. Patria potestas cannot inflict any punishment nor cause any harm to the child unless this is necessary for the ordained good of the family	181
Chapter 3. Patria potestas can do all that is required for the ordained good of the family
Article 1. Unlawfulness of a power, and unlawfulness in the way it is exercised	182
Article 2. The ordained good of the family	183
Article 3. Continuation: the value of each member of a family in the sum total of the good of the body	185
Article 4. The relative proportions of seigniorial and governmental right found in patria potestas	186
Article 5. Comment on Roman legislation about patria potestas	188
Chapter 4. The jural rights and purely moral rights of parents	191
Chapter 5. Jural blood-relationships, social domestic relationships and civil-domestic relationships between parents and children	194
Article 1. Jural blood-relationships between parents and their children	194
Article 2. Socio-domestic relationships between parents and children	195
Article 3. The jural civil-domestic relationships between parents and children	199
CONCLUSION	204
Appendix	210
Index of Biblical References	233
Index of Persons	235
General Index	238