

Contents

Introduction—Blank Spaces, Fresh Pages: Taylor Swift and/as Literature Betsy Winakur Tontiplaphol and Anastasia Klimchynskaya	1
Part 1 All of the Books Beside Your Bed: Engaging the Literary-Historical Canon
1 “I haven’t met the new me yet”: folklore/evermore and Taylor Swift’s Self-Fashioned Renaissance Devori Kimbro	9
2 Big Reputation: Reading Taylor Swift with Eighteenth-Century Women Writers Bridget Donnelly	23
3 “Just to break me like a promise”: Taylor Swift as Ridiculous Romantic Heroine Rita J. Dashwood	37
4 “What are my ‘Wordsworth?’”: Taylor Swift’s New Romanticism Brittany Reid and Taylor McKee	49
5 Baby, We’re the Late Romantics: Taylor Swift and the English Biedermeier Betsy Winakur Tontiplaphol	63
6 Modernist Intertextualities in folklore and evermore Jennifer Smith	77
Part 2 Every Version of Yourself Tonight: Examining Gender, Sexuality, and Race
7 The Death of the Pop Auteur: Taylor Swift’s Feminist Politics of Collaboration and Revision Stephen Grandchamp	91
8 “No one likes a mad woman”: The Crazy Ex-Girlfriend Trope and/as Feminist Resistance in Taylor Swift’s Music and Mythology Ryanne Kap	105
9 Female Millennial Rage: The Weaponization of Cottagecore Katherine Murray	117
10 “She would’ve made such a lovely bride”: Queer Anxieties on folklore and evermore Erin Geary	131
11 What It Means to Shake It Off: Taylor Swift, Race, and Citizenship Shaun Cullen	139

Part 3	Time, Curious Time: (Re-)Writing Memory
12	“Time, curious time”: Time, Memory, and Agency in Taylor Swift Miranda Steege	151
13	“Say you’ll remember me . . . all too well”: Taylor Swift’s Memory Work Maggie Laurel Boyd	163
14	“Scrap[s] of you”: Fabrics of Memory in folklore and evermore Claire Hurley	175
15	“The corner I haunt”: Trauma, Time, and Space in Taylor Swift’s Post-Hiatus Oeuvre Carolin Isabel Steiner	187
Part 4	This Ain’t a Fairy Tale: Considering Craft, Genre, and Mediation
16	Show, Don’t Tell? How Taylor Swift Complicates a Writing Cliché Samantha Bañal	201
17	“I never knew I could feel that much”: Taylor Swift’s Recuperative Aesthetics of Excess Anastasia Klimchynskaya	213
18	“Making the stone stony”: The Paradox of Defamiliarization and Hyperfamiliarity in Taylor Swift’s Songwriting Margrét Ann Thors	225
19	“This is me trying”: Autofiction and Taylor Swift Maria Juko	237
20	(Taylor’s Version): Authenticity and Aura in Taylor Swift’s Re-Recordings Meghan Kuehnle	249
	Contributors	263
	Index	267