

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments	vi
Preface	1
Introduction: Pop Goes the Avant-Garde	4

Part One: All You Need Is Studio Time (or, the Ballad of John and Yoko): The Beatles

1. Rebranding the Beatles: Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band (1967)	19
2. Music Television: Magical Mystery Tour (1967)	32
3. The Dialectic of Lennon/McCartney: The Beatles (a.k.a. The White Album) (1968)	43
4. One Bad Apple: John Lennon, Yoko Ono and the Avant-Garde Turn	55
5. Breaking Up Is Hard to Do: Abbey Road (1969) and Let It Be (1970)	65

Part Two: No Commercial Potential: Frank Zappa and the Mothers of Invention

6. Zappa in Context: Pal Recording Studio and The Steve Allen Show (1963)	79
7. Motherly Summer of Love: Freak Out! (1966)	85
8. Nothing Succeeds Like Excess: Absolutely Free (1967) and "Rock Theater"	93

9. The Conscience of a (Practical) Conservative: We're Only in It for the Money (1968)	104
10. Project/Object: Zappa, Mass Culture and Postmodernism	116

Part Three: All Tomorrow's Parties:
The Velvet Underground

11. Andy Says: The Exploding Plastic Inevitable and The Velvet Underground and Nico (1967)	143
12. The Black Album: White Light/White Heat (1968)	157
13. Playing It Safe: The Velvet Underground (1969) and Loaded (1970)	168
Conclusion: The Avant-Garde Goes Pop	178
Discography	187
Chapter Notes	191
Bibliography	212
Index	217