

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
Introduction	xi
Early Modern Women and the History of Philosophy	xi
Cavendish and Conway	xiv
Methods and Content	xviii
Abbreviations	xxiii
Chronology	xxv
1. Matter and Spirit	1
Worldmaking	2
Constituent Parts of Matter	6
Cavendish and Atoms	17
Conway on the Existence of the World	20
The Nature of Spirit	22
Conway and Monads	28
2. Wholes and Parts	32
Cavendish's Monism	32
Cavendishian Holism	36
Conway and Monism	38
Priority Monism	42
3. Life and Self-Motion	46
Cavendish on Self-Motion	46
The Power of Self-Motion	50
Self-Motion	52
The Limits of the Power of Self-Motion	56
Self-Motion and Irregularity	58
Conway on the Power of Self-Motion	61
Two Types of Motion and Motion as a Mode	64
4. Individuals and Identity	71
Individuals in Cavendish	71
Generation, Growth, and Death	78
Identity over Time	82
The Unity of the Mind	84
Conway on Individuals	87

Generation, Death, and Metempsychosis	91
Identity over Time	97
Unity in Multiplicity	99
5. Causation and Perception	102
Cavendish on Causation and Perception	102
Two Types of Causation	104
Entire and Principal Causes	106
Dreams and Double Perception	112
Nature as the Principal Cause	117
Conway on Mechanical Causation	120
Sympathy and Vital Interaction	123
Perception, Cognition, and Knowledge	127
6. Liberty and Necessity	133
The Controversy over Liberty in Cavendish	133
Cavendish's Compatibilism	136
Conway on God's and Creatures' Liberty	143
Problems with Freedom	149
7. Natural Philosophy and Theodicy	154
Cavendish and the New Science	154
Hobbes and Descartes	156
Bacon and Boyle	160
Hooke	164
The Institutions of Natural Philosophy	169
Goodness and Perfection	172
Punishments and Rewards	174
Restoration and Eternal Salvation	178
8. Conclusion	183
Bibliography	187
Index	197