
Murdering to Dissect

Grave-robbing, Frankenstein
and the anatomy literature

Tim Marshall

Manchester University Press

Manchester and New York

Distributed exclusively in the USA and Canada by St Martin's Press

Contents

Illustrations	xi
Acknowledgements	xii
Chronology of events	xiii
Introduction: murdering to dissect	I
The Edinburgh scandal 1828–29	I
Galvanism	4
Utopia and reality	7
Frankenstein and the 1832 Anatomy Act	II
Part I Frankenstein: the 1832 context	17
1 The dead body business	19
Bentham's auto-icon	19
Richardson's argument in Death, Dissection and the Destitute	23
Sir Walter Scott in Edinburgh, 1829	28
The surgeon as murderer: On Murder considered as one of the Fine Arts	33
The contented executioner in Barnaby Rudge	38
2 Multi-accentuation in On Murder considered as one of the Fine Arts and Frankenstein	44
Social signs	44
The Note of the Editor in On Murder considered as one of the Fine Arts	46
The politics of anatomy: the voices in Frankenstein , 1831	50

Part II	The law made flesh	61
3	The instruments of law	63
	Intextuation	63
	Public and comparative anatomy	68
	Trading	74
	The surgeon as artist: John Hunter and Mrs Martin Van Butchell	79
	Aesthetics and murder	83
4	The death command, anatomy and the law, 1750–1850	91
	The gibbet	91
	Frankenstein : the arche-command	94
	Claiming	97
	1832: the domestication of command	102
	The coach scene in Oliver Twist and Frankenstein	106
	Dickens' executioner	110
	Barnaby Rudge and Frankenstein : the sting of command	113
Part III	The eighteenth century	127
5	The medical gaze and popular culture	129
	Hogarth's 'The Reward of Cruelty'	129
	Unhallowed wretches	137
	Duplication	141
	The 'gallows wedding' in Frankenstein	143
	The watching ritual	150
	I will be with you on your wedding-night	156
6	Paternalism and poverty: the 1780s and 1790s	160
	Blake's 'accidental'	160
	Speenhamland and the market system	162
	Crabbe's crowd	166
	Frankenstein and pauper lunacy	169

Contents	ix
Part IV The early nineteenth century	175
7 Frankenstein and the resurrectionist culture, 1796–1825	177
Southey's The Surgeon's Warning	177
William Godwin's Essay on Sepulchres , 1809 and Thomas Southwood Smith's The Use of the Dead to the Living , 1824	179
The hulks	185
Joanna Southcott's dissection, 1814	188
The punishment of poverty and Frankenstein	198
Anti and pro dissection: the pamphlet literature of the 1820s	201
Utilitarianism: morality and secrecy	206
Pain and grief in Frankenstein	212
8 Burkophobia, cholera-phobia and the law: Frankenstein in 1831	219
Edinburgh	219
The political allegory	230
From crowd to social class	238
Microscopic vision and the plague	241
Clerval	251
The surgeon's alibi	253
Cholera-phobia	256
Disease, deformity and dissection	260
The graveyard	270
Panic	274
Laughter	282
The hare	290
The Ship-of-State	296
9 Frankenstein's mask: England 1831–32	303
The mask	303
'The burnings, the alarms'	310
The midnight figure	315

10	Conclusion	329
	Two nations, two funerals: 'the punishment of the poor men' in Mrs Gaskell's Mary Barton	331
	Select bibliography	340
	Index	347