

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements		vii
List of Illustrations		ix
Introduction	Writing Patrimony: The Son's Book of the Father as a Sub-genre	1
Part I: Challenging Authority
Chapter One	'The Paradigm Case': Contesting the Father in Edmund Gosse's Father and Son: A Study of Two Temperaments	17
Chapter Two	'An Indubitable Australian': Renouncing the Father in Hal Porter's The Watcher on the Cast-Iron Balcony	39
Part II: Memorialising Self-Denial
Chapter Three	'Words to Keep Fully Amongst Us': Honouring the Father in Raimond Gaita's Romulus, My Father	61
Chapter Four	'I Really Was the Son of Such a Man': Replacing the Father in Richard Freadman's Shadow of Doubt: My Father and Myself	87
Part III: Performing Masculinity
Chapter Five	A Speaking Subject/A Watching Object: Addressing the Father in Peter Rose's Rose Boys	115
Chapter Six	Choosing Patrimony: Performing for the Father in John Hughes's The Idea of Home	139
Chapter Seven	'Neither to Vindicate nor to Vilify': Becoming the Father in Robert Gray's The Land I Came Through Last	161
Conclusion	The Turn to the Father in Autobiography	191
Bibliography		201
Index		209