

Table of contents

Preface and acknowledgements	XI
Abbreviations and orthographic conventions	XVII
CHAPTER 1
Introduction	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 Linguistic anthropology	6
1.3 The indeterminacy of reference	10
1.4 Bininj Gunwok, dialects and location	14
1.5 Eastern Bininj Gunwok in brief geographical and historical context	18
1.6 Synopsis	20
CHAPTER 2
Bininj Gunwok kinship systems	23
2.1 Introduction	23
2.2 Moieties, subsections and other social categories	25
2.3 Subsections in Bininj Gunwok	27
2.4 Bininj Gunwok basic kin terms	32
2.5 Arguments about Bininj Gunwok kinship	35
2.6 Generation skewing	39
2.7 Ceremonial moieties	44
2.8 Concluding remarks	46
CHAPTER 3
Ways of referring to people in Bininj Gunwok	49
3.1 Introduction	49
3.2 Diversity in person reference	49
3.3 Basic kin terms	50
3.4 Other types of non-vocative terms	53
3.5 Dyadic terms	59
3.6 Kinship verbs	60
3.6.1 Successive generation patrilineal and matrilineal kin, bornang, yawmang	60
3.6.2 Semantics of kinship verbs	63
3.6.3 Other kinship verb expressions	69

- 3.7 Other forms of person reference 71
 - 3.7.1 Reference by subsection 71
 - 3.7.2 Use of clan names in reference 75
 - 3.7.3 Cross-sex sibling reference 78
 - 3.7.4 Reference to the deceased 87
 - 3.7.5 Reference by matrilineal phratry terms 89
 - 3.7.6 Nicknames 90
- 3.8 Some concluding comments 93

CHAPTER 4

The kun-debi system of triadic kinship reference 95

- 4.1 Introduction 95
- 4.2 Triadic kinship systems in other languages 98
- 4.3 Deficiencies of the triangle analogy 101
- 4.4 Centricity 103
 - 4.4.1 Centricity type 103
 - 4.4.1.1 Egocentric terms 104
 - 4.4.1.2 Tucentric terms 105
 - 4.4.1.3 Tucentric dyad 105
 - 4.4.1.4 Dicentric terms 106
 - 4.4.1.5 'Isosceles' terms 107
 - 4.4.1.6 Acentric terms 108
 - 4.4.1.7 Equilateral terms 108
 - 4.4.2 Centricity encoding 109
 - 4.4.3 Centricity stability 110
- 4.5 Linguistic form and semantics of kun-debi terms 111
 - 4.5.1 na-karrng/ngal-karrng 112
 - 4.5.2 na-kiwalak/ngal-kiwalak 114
 - 4.5.3 -dadjkawarre 115
 - 4.5.4 Pronouns and kun-kurrng register as kun-debi 115
 - 4.5.5 Kun-debi and neutralization 116
- 4.6 Predicting centricity 119
 - 4.6.1 The juniority-seniority principle 119
 - 4.6.2 The markedness of certain affinal kin 121
- 4.7 Kun-debi and indeterminacy 125
- 4.8 Learning Kun-debi 131
- 4.9 Concluding comments 132

CHAPTER 5

Reference, grammar and indeterminacy in Bininj Gunwok conversation 135

- 5.1 Introduction 135

5.2	Person reference, reference tracking and semantic generality	136
5.2.1	Some grammatical background	138
5.2.2	Theorizing a 'preference for use of the implicit over the explicit'	143
5.3	Background local knowledge and inferring the identity of underspecified referents – some examples	150
5.4	Generic and impersonal uses of some verbal participant prefixes	155
5.5	Concluding comments	163
CHAPTER 6
	Culture, reference and circumspection	165
6.1	The language of ceremony and esoteric knowledge	167
6.2	Circumspect language and kinship relationships characterised by restraint	178
6.3	The circumspect nature of requests	180
6.4	Joking	181
6.5	Concluding comments	184
CHAPTER 7
	The path of inference: The unravelling of referring expressions	185
7.1	Introduction	185
7.2	A story about hunting kangaroos	187
7.2.1	Background	187
7.2.2	Episode 1: First mentions – clans names and place names	187
7.2.3	Episodes 2 & 3: Kun-derbi and basic kin terms	191
7.2.4	Episode 4: Kun-derbi and nicknames	194
7.2.5	Episode 5: Ceremonial names and basic kin terms	199
7.2.6	Episode 6: Multiple referring expressions	201
7.2.7	Episode 7: Referring expressions in interactive competition	206
7.3	Telephone conversations	210
7.4	Other kinds of refusal to upgrade recognitional expressions	218
7.5	Concluding comments	219
CHAPTER 8
	The trouble with Wamud: A conversational example of unsuccessful reference	221
8.1	Introduction	221
8.2	Introducing the problem referent (lines 1–16)	223
8.3	Recognition via linking kin	227
8.3.1	Link number 1	227
8.3.2	Link number 2: Establishing common ground	230

8.3.3	Other linking kin	233
8.3.4	Linking kin: Circumspect and associative reference	236
8.4	Conclusion – recognition is not always essential to ‘fruitful’ reference	238
CHAPTER 9
	Person reference: Culture, cognition and theories of communication	241
9.1	In summary	241
9.2	Bininj Gunwok person reference and theories of communication	245
9.2.1	Recognitional demonstratives	250
9.2.2	Pronouns in switch reference	251
9.3	Some general comments about circumspection	253
9.4	A preference for the implicit as a form of verbal art	255
	References	259
	Language index	269
	Subject index	271