

Contents

List of Tables and Figures xi

Preface xiii

List of Russian Terms xvii

Introduction. A Short History of Taxes: Russia and the World from the Eighteenth to the Twenty-First Centuries 3

The Analytic Categories: The State, the Economy, and the Person
Taxes and Regimes: Russia in International Context
And Russia in Its Own Context
Historians on Russian Taxation

Part 1. People, Places, Things: The Old Regime, Economic Knowledge, and the Coming of the New Order

- 1 The Fiscal Instruments of Regime Change from the Eighteenth to the Nineteenth Centuries 27
 - The Fiscal Idiom of Civic Reform*
 - The Novelty of the State Budget and the New Space of Economics*
 - The Fiscal Reformers*
 - Poll Taxes, State Knowledge, and the Problem of Equivalencies*
 - "And Yet the Arrears Were Never Collected": The Problem of Accountability*
- 2 Three Tax Reforms, Three Visions of the Polity 55
 - Ignore the Person: The Logic of Property Taxes after 1855*
 - The Making of an Urban-Rural Divide*
 - Indirect Taxation, the Free Market, and Their Discontents*

The Excise Inspectors

The Public View of the Private, and the Meanings of Laissez-Faire

Part 2. The Politics of Visibility, the Technologies of Intimacy: Taxes and the Remaking of Urban and Commercial Russia

- 3 Wealth in Motion: New Money, New Taxes, and a New Bureaucracy 87
Capitalism and Privacy in Russia and the North Atlantic
The Tax Inspectorate, Nikolai Bunge, and Popular Welfare
Dead Souls: The Inheritance Tax and the Economic Personality
Corporations, Personhood, and the Case for Transparency
Enter the Citizen: The Apartment Tax
- 4 Systematic Intimacy: Business Taxes and the Disciplining of Commercial Russia 126
The Laws of 1885 and the Map of Commercial Russia
Disclosure, Exposure, and the Uses of the Norm
Capital Gains, Contracts, Deeds, and Urban Real Estate
Economic Individuation and State Aggregation
- 5 Mass Taxation in the Age of the Individual: The New Personal Taxation in Russia and the World 151
Back to the Person: Russia and the International Debate over the Income Tax
The Russian Income Tax and the Political Crisis of 1905
The Inexorable Logic of Universalism
- 6 The Income Tax as Modern Government: Assessment, Self-Assessment, and Mutual Surveillance 174
The Mechanisms of Participation
The Individual and the Personality in Fiscal Practice
Evasion and Transparency
The Income Tax and the Great War
Russia and the Modern State

Part 3. The Politics of Obscurity: Peasant Taxes, Excises, and the Vodka Monopoly to 1917

- 7 Everyone and No One: Indirect Taxes and the Vodka Monopoly to 1917 207
Revenue, Per Capita Rates, and the Limits of Social Reform

	From Laissez-Faire to Nationalization
	Treasure, Public Order, and Public Health
	Prohibition, the War Budget, and the Financial Catastrophe
8	The Peasant and the Fisc: The State Budget and the Persistence of Collective Tax Apportionment	237
	Peasant Direct Taxes and the State Revenue Budget to 1914
	State Policy and the Practices of Uncertainty
9	The Local Practices of Peasant Taxation	257
	Repartition
	Arrears and Forgiveness
	Collection and Punishment
	Taxes in Kind
	Was a Peasant a Person? Rural Taxation and the War-Time Crisis
Part 4. The State and Revolution, the State and Evolution: Fiscal Practices and a New Regime, 1917–30
10	Soviet Russia and the Continuing History of the Russian State	295
11	The Meanings of Utopia: Taxes, Urban Unities, and the Several Assaults on Peasant Separateness, 1917–21	306
	Urban Taxes, Nationalization, and the Achievable Utopia
	The Peasantry, Limited Government, and Unlimited Force
12	The Economy of Licences: Taxes and the New Economic Policy	333
	Afterword. Russia, Socialism, and the Modern State	347
	Notes	351
	Bibliography	439
	Index	471