

Table of Contents

Acknowledgements	7
Archival References	8
Monetary Equivalents	8
Notice	8
Part I - The Auctions
Introduction	11
1 Orphan Chamber Auctions in Amsterdam	15
2 How Auction Sales of the Orphan Chamber Were Conducted	20
3 Extant Records of Auction Sales in Chronological Perspective	27
4 Aggregate Statistics of Sales and the Owners of Goods Sold	33
5 The Buyers at Auction Sales	41
6 The Wealth of Buyers	52
7 Clusters of Private Buyers	57
8 Remonstrants and Counter-Remonstrants	77
9 What Did They Buy and at What Prices?	87
10 Attributions	93
11 Echoes	100
12 Concluding Words on Auctions	108
Part II - Profiles of Selected Buyers
Introduction	113
13 Art Dealers I: Artists and Merchants in the Trade	114
14 Art Dealers II: Johannes de Renialme	130
15 Art Dealers III: The Story of a Merchant Who Thought He Could Sell Paintings to a King	144

16	Art Collectors and Painters I: Rubens's Promise to Hans Thijsz.	153
17	Art Collectors and Painters II: Jacob Swalmius and Rembrandt	164
18	Art Collectors and Painters III: Marten van den Broeck and Rembrandt's Losses at Sea	180
19	Art Collectors and Painters IV: Jan van Maerlen and His Extended Family	188
20	Art Collectors and Painters V: Jean le Bleu, François Venant and Rembrandt's "Feast of Belshazzar"	204
21	A Collector with Connections to Major Cultural Figures: Robbert van der Hoeve and the "Muiden Circle"	209
22	What Santa Claus Brought to the Youth of Amsterdam	220
23	When Sellers and Buyers Were Related: Elbert and Cornelis Symonsz. Pool, Jeltge Claes, and Pieter Claesz. Codde	226
24	A Collector Who Held On to His Purchase for Over Fifty Years	234
25	An Afterword on Mentalités	243
	Bibliography	247
	Published Sources	249
	Notes	257
	List of illustration	309
	Index	310