

Contents

96

Acknowledgements	vii
General Editor's Introduction	ix
1 Introduction: Defining the Issues	1
English literature as a subject
The examination system
The literary curriculum
What follows?
2 Planning the Course	12
What is the course to achieve?
Attitudes towards teaching and learning in the examination years
Planning the course
Choosing books for study
3 Studying Literature	32
What do students learn?
Approaching the text: a teacher prepares
Practising criticism
Learning to write about literature
4 Teaching The Taming of the Shrew at A-level	52
Case study by Richard Gill
5 Teaching Garner's Red Shift for an Alternative A-level	61
Case study by Terry Gifford
6 Working with Plays	70
The drama curriculum
Particular difficulties
Some principles
Practical approaches
Comparative approaches
Analytic approaches

7	Teaching Pinter for Examinations Case study by Bill Greenwell	86
8	Working with Fiction The prose curriculum Particular difficulties Some principles Practical approaches Comparative approaches Analytic approaches	96
9	Teaching Heller's Catch-22 Case study by Judith Atkinson	109
10	Working with poetry The poetry curriculum Particular difficulties Some principles Practical approaches Comparative approaches Analytic approaches	123
11	Teaching T.S. Eliot: Travelling Hopefully Case study by Jane Ogborn	138
12	Conclusion: Looking Forward	147
	Notes and References	152
	Index	163