

Table of contents

Acknowledgments

1	Introduction	1
	1.1 A definition of discourse studies	1
	1.2 The aim and structure of this book	2
	1.3 The presentation of the material	4
PART I GENERAL ORIENTATION
2	Language as a verbal instrument	7
	2.1 The Organon model	7
	2.2 The cooperative principle	9
	2.3 Politeness strategies	12
3	Communication as action	21
	3.1 Pragmatics and speech act theory	21
	3.2 Illocutions	22
	3.3 Illocutions in discourse	25
4	Formal aspects	32
	4.1 The message between sender and receiver	32
	4.2 Seven criteria for textuality	34
	4.3 Five types of cohesion	37
5	Functional aspects	43
	5.1 The discourse situation	43
	5.2 Institutional discourse	45
	5.3 Objectives and effects	48

PART II BASIC PHENOMENA

6	Structured meaning	53
	6.1 Propositions	53
	6.2 Macrostructures and superstructures	56
	6.3 Topics	62
7	Discourse connections	69
	7.1 Discourse relations	69
	7.2 Anaphora	73
	7.3 Deixis	76
8	Types	86
	8.1 Written language versus verbal interaction	86
	8.2 Everyday and literary language	88
	8.3 Discourse classification	90
9	Styles	96
	9.1 Views on style	96
	9.2 Examples of stylistic research	100
	9.3 The metaphor in everyday language	103

PART III SPECIFIC DISCOURSE TYPES

10	Interaction	107
	10.1 Transcription systems	107
	10.2 The turn-taking model	109
	10.3 Sequential organization	112
11	Narration	118
	11.1 Historical background	118
	11.2 The sociolinguistic approach	120
	11.3 The psycholinguistic approach	122

12	Argumentation	128
12.1	The social-psychological framework	128
12.2	Argumentation analysis	130
12.3	Style and persuasion	135
PART IV PRODUCTION AND PERCEPTION
13	The presentation of information	141
13.1	Staging	141
13.2	Perspectivization	144
13.3	Given-new management	148
14	The derivation of information	154
14.1	Presuppositions	154
14.2	Inferences	158
14.3	The role of prior knowledge	161
15	Producing discourse	169
15.1	From thought to text	169
15.2	Writing skills	173
15.3	Judging text quality	177
16	Understanding discourse	184
16.1	Readability formulas	184
16.2	The measurement of understanding	187
16.3	A model of the reading process	189
17	Epilogue	196
17.1	A framework of the concepts	196
17.2	Major issues	199
17.3	On further study	203
	References	205
	Index	218