

CONTENTS

	Page
Part I. ACTION	1
I. Introduction	1
II. Some Theories on the Logic of Action	2
II.a. von Wright	2
II.b. Davidson	4
II.c. Pörn	10
II.d. Aqvist	12
III. Some Items from the Theory of Verbs involving Agency	28
III.a. Evidence for the Presence of Agency in certain Verb Classes	28
III.b. Agency and the Progressive in English	34
√ III.c. The Formal Structure of Verbs	37
III.c.1. Dowty	37
III.c.2. Hoepelman	46
III.d. Two Important Classes	51
III.d.1. Accomplishments	51
III.d.2. Activities	54
IV. Reciprocal Verbs and the Passive	56
V. DO	71
V.1. A Formal Semantics	73
V.1.a. A Semantics for WANT	77
V.1.b. A Semantics for DO	82
V.1.c. Letting and Forbearing	88
VI. DO and the Semantics of Reciprocal Verbs	90
VII. Some Left-Over Problems	94

	Page
Part II. COMPARISON AND CHANGE	99
I. Introduction	99
II. A Calculus for Adjectives and Nouns	100
III. Vagueness, Supervaluations and Comparison Classes	105
IV. Problems with Supervaluations and Comparison Classes	108
V. An Alternative Proposal	110
√VI. A Language and a Semantics for Adjectives	113
VII. Subclasses of Adjectives and their Properties	129
VII.a. Privative Adjectives	129
VII.b. Affirmative Adjectives	129
VII.c. Linear Adjectives	129
√VII.d. Strongly Predicative Adjectives	131
√VII.e. Weakly Predicative Adjectives	132
VII.f. Strongly Extensional Adjectives	133
VII.g. Weakly Extensional Adjectives	134
VII.h. One Dimensional Adjectives	134
VIII. Some Items of the Semantics	135
IX. An Axiom System	141
X. On the Order of Adjectives	143
XI. Some Further Remarks on the Comparative	145
XII. The Description of Change	158
XII.1. The Combination of the Tree-System for Action Sentences with the System for Adjectives	160
XII.2. The Language L'.	162
XII.3. Semantics for L'.	163
XII.4. Truth Conditions and a Hypothesis.	167
XIII. Coda; A Final Remark on the Logical Form of Comparatives.	176
Footnotes	179
References	188