

Contents }

Foreword to the Second Edition	xi
Preface to the First Edition	xiii
Acknowledgments	xvii

PART I: ARTISTIC PURITY AND THE RHETORIC OF FICTION

I Telling and Showing	3
Authoritative "Telling" in Early Narration	3
Two Stories from the Decameron	9
The Author's Many Voices	16
II General Rules, I: "True Novels Must Be Realistic"	23
From Justified Revolt to Crippling Dogma	23
From Differentiated Kinds to Universal Qualities	29
General Criteria in Earlier Periods	33
Three Sources of General Criteria: The Work, the Author, the Reader	37
Intensity of Realistic Illusion	40
The Novel as Unmediated Reality	50
On Discriminating among Realisms	53
The Ordering of Intensities	60
III General Rules, II: "All Authors Should Be Objective"	67
Neutrality and the Author's "Second Self"	67
Impartiality and "Unfair" Emphasis	77
Impassibilité	81
Subjectivism Encouraged by Impersonal Techniques	83
	vii

Contents	viii
IV General Rules, III: "True Art Ignores the Audience"	89
"True Artists Write Only for Themselves"	89
Theories of Pure Art	91
The "Impurity" of Great Literature	98
Is a Pure Fiction Theoretically Desirable?	109
V General Rules, IV: Emotions, Beliefs, and the Reader's Objectivity	119
"Tears and Laughter Are, Aesthetically, Frauds"	119
Types of Literary Interest (and Distance)	125
Combinations and Conflicts of Interests	133
The Role of Belief	137
Belief Illustrated: The Old Wives' Tale	144
VI Types of Narration	149
Person	150
Dramatized and Undramatized Narrators	151
Observers and Narrator-Agents	153
Scene and Summary	154
Commentary	155
Self-Conscious Narrators	155
Variations of Distance	155
Variations in Support or Correction	159
Privilege	160
Inside Views	163
PART II: THE AUTHOR'S VOICE IN FICTION
VII The Uses of Reliable Commentary	169
Providing the Facts, Picture, or Summary	169
Molding Beliefs	177
Relating Particulars to the Established Norms	182
Heightening the Significance of Events	196
Generalizing the Significance of the Whole Work	197
Manipulating Mood	200
Commenting Directly on the Work Itself	205
VIII Telling as Showing: Dramatized Narrators, Reliable and Unreliable	211

Reliable Narrators as Dramatized Spokesmen for the Implied Author	211
“Fielding” in Tom Jones	215
Imitators of Fielding	218
Tristram Shandy and the Problem of Formal Coherence	221
Three Formal Traditions: Comic Novel, Collection, and Satire	224
The Unity of Tristram Shandy	229
Shandean Commentary, Good and Bad	234
IX Control of Distance in Jane Austen’s Emma	243
Sympathy and Judgment in Emma	243
Sympathy through Control of Inside Views	245
Control of Judgment	249
The Reliable Narrator and the Norms of Emma	256
Explicit Judgments on Emma Woodhouse	262
The Implied Author as Friend and Guide	264
PART III: IMPERSONAL NARRATION
X The Uses of Authorial Silence	271
“Exit Author” Once Again	271
Control of Sympathy	274
Control of Clarity and Confusion	284
“Secret Communion” between Author and Reader	300
XI The Price of Impersonal Narration, I: Confusion of Distance	311
The Turn of the Screw as Puzzle	311
Troubles with Irony in Earlier Literature	316
The Problem of Distance in A Portrait of the Artist	323
XII The Price of Impersonal Narration, II: Henry James and the Unreliable Narrator	339
The Development from Flawed Reflector into Subject	340
The Two Liars in “The Liar”	347

“The Purloining of the Aspern Papers” or “The Evocation of Venice”?	354
“Deep Readers of the World, Beware!”	364
XIII The Morality of Impersonal Narration	377
Morality and Technique	377
The Seductive Point of View: Céline as Example	379
The Author’s Moral Judgment Obscured	385
The Morality of Elitism	391
AFTERWORD TO THE SECOND EDITION: The Rhetoric in Fiction and Fiction as Rhetoric: Twenty-One Years Later	401
Bibliography	459
Supplementary Bibliography, 1961–82, by James Phelan	495
Index to the First Edition	521
Index to the Bibliographies	543