
Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
1 Feminist poetics	1
Metalanguage and rewriting	1
Subjectivity, body, performativity	4
Telling intertextual histories	9
Rewriting linguistics	12
2 The poetics of rewriting: poiesis, transmission, discipleship?	16
Kuhn and paradigm change	17
Newton and rhetoric: the social construction of genre and science	18
Scientific fictions: making Newton differently	20
Performing the scientific body	21
Foucault rewriting the disciplines	22
De Certeau reading Foucault rewriting	25
Roland Barthes and the subject of reading and writing	30
Reading formations and the outside of discipline	31
Poiesis and discipleship	33
3 Teresa de Lauretis: sexing the subject of semiosis	35
Telling (his)stories	38
Feminist film theory	40
Imaging: the perception/signification nexus	42
Narrative and desire	45
Sexing the subject of semiosis	47
Meaning, habit and social change	49
High and popular culture	52
Whose feminist poetics now?	54
4 Discourse, expressibility and things to do with Foucault	58
Foucault and discourse	58
Foucault, linguistics and the visible (non-discursive)	62
Intertextuality and interdiscursivity	66

The microphysics of power and the ethics of the self	67
The outside of knowledge	71
Butler and discourse as performativity	82
5 Rewriting linguistic poetics: the trace of the corporeal	85
Language as social semiotic	90
Rewriting register	95
Genre	96
Habitus: corporeality and the text	97
Intertextuality and the textual function of language as embodied performance	102
Metalinguage and the problem of metasemiosis	103
Rewriting the linguistic system	105
6 Patriarchal contexts	110
Habermas: gendered theories of the social	111
Derrida and the speech act	114
Performing generic violence and the making of sexual difference	118
7 Poiesis, performance, (his)stories: black man, white woman, irresistible impulse	134
'The body enacts the past . . . what is "learned by the body" is . . . something that one is' (Bourdieu 1980/1990: 73)	134
Framing white Australia	136
Ned Kelly, bushranging, the Dora Dora murders and Sandawara	141
The cultural construction of murder	144
Reading the archive	145
Feminist voices: other stories	146
Legal fictions	148
Media, nation and narration: 'the thrill of horror'	150
Race and unruly women	153
The meanings of protection	154
Waif, witch, whore: white women who marry black men	160
Irresistible passion: reading and writing the other	163
8 The other side of discourse: traces of bodies at work	168
Keneally: the neatness of the structure	170
Discourse, genre, dialogism	173
Clune, Keneally, Schepisi: huge stabilities of discourse	183
Mrs Fitzpatrick: making memories	189
History and Aboriginal texts: Mudrooroo's Doin Wildcat	191
Coda: narrative, memory, identity	195
Bibliography	203
Index	216