

CONTENTS

PREFATORY NOTE	IX
I. GENERAL THEORY OF THE NEOCLASSIC SERMON
a) The Sermon's Literary Art	1
b) The Sermon's Limits of Style	20
c) The Sermon's Structure	37
II. TEXT, SUBJECT, EXORDIUM, EXPLICATION, PROPOSITION, AND PARTITION
a) Text and Subject	43
b) Exordium and Explication	49
1. The Relation of the Exordium to the Subject	57
2. The Style of the Exordium	60
3. The Length of the Exordium	64
4. The Relation of the Explication to the Text	66
5. The Style and Length of the Explication	70
c) Proposition and Partition	76
III. THE SERMON'S MAIN BODY: ARGUMENTATIVE PART AND APPLICATION
a) The Four Genera	82
1. The Explicatory Sermon	84
2. The Observatory Sermon	86
3. The Applicative Sermon	89
4. The Propositional Sermon	94
b) The Arrangement of the Arguments	96
1. Logical Arrangement	100
2. Climactic Arrangement	103
3. Selective Arrangement	106
c) The Application of the Arguments	110

IV. THE SERMON'S EPILOGUE	120
V. THE DELIVERY OF THE SERMON
a) The Forbidden Extremes of Voice and Gesture	128
1. Dryness and Ecstasy	132
2. Meanness and Affectation	142
VI. THE IDEAL PREACHER	151
VII. NEOCLASSIC AND LATITUDINARIAN
a) God's Benevolence to Man	162
1. Free Will versus Predestination	169
2. Virtuous Heathens	174
3. Natural Morality	178
b) The Necessity of Revelation	184
1. Reward and Punishment	187
2. Justifying Faith	201
3. Piety and Virtue	204
c) The Best of All Possible Worlds	208
1. The Benefaction of Providence	209
2. The Profitableness of Afflictions	213
3. Charity and Toleration	217
VIII. RETROSPECT	234
IX. SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY OF PRIMARY SOURCES
	237
X. SELECTED BIBLIOGRAPHY OF SECONDARY SOURCES
	253
XI. INDEX	258