

CONTENTS

PART III. SHAKESPEAREAN CHARACTER IN THE ROMANTIC AGE

VIII. Macbeth and Richard III: Dramatic Character and the Shakespearean Critical Tradition
i. The Study of Shakespearean Character	189
ii. Shakespearean Character through Johnson and Mrs. Montagu	191
iii. Sentiment and Imagination: Richardson, Whately, and Their Followers	201
IX. Garrick's Shakespeare and Subjective Dramatic Character
i. Punch's Feelings: The Problem of Acting Theory in the Eighteenth Century	216
ii. Shakespeare, Cibber, and Garrick's Richard III	223
iii. Garrick's "Restored" Macbeth	233
X. Shakespearean Character on the Early Romantic Stage
i. Kemble and the "Science" of Shakespearean Acting	243
ii. Kemble and Mrs. Siddons in Macbeth	253
iii. Kemble, Cooke, and Transition in Richard III	269
iv. Summary: The Man of Feeling in a World of Horror	276
XI. Coleridge, Lamb, and the Theater of the Mind
i. Innovation in the Early Nineteenth Century	280
ii. Lamb, Closet Criticism, and the Sense of the Dramatic	281
iii. Coleridge and the Problem of Criticism	288
iv. Coleridge's Ordonio and the Revisions in Remorse	291
v. Coleridge on Richard III and Macbeth	301
XII. Hazlitt, Kean, and the Lofty Platform of Imagination
i. Leigh Hunt and Thomas Barnes: Common Life and Tragedy	313
ii. Hazlitt and the Sense of the Dramatic	323
iii. Hazlitt on Kean as Richard III and Macbeth	333
Conclusion	344
Bibliographical Note	349
Index	379