

Contents

List of figures	vii
General editors' preface	ix
Notes on contributors	xi
1 Introduction Philip Shaw	1
2 'A few harmless Numbers': British women poets and the climate of war, 1793–1815 Stephen C. Behrendt	13
3 The exiled self: images of war in Charlotte Smith's 'The Emigrants' Jacqueline M. Labbe	37
4 The harsh delights of political duty: Thelwall, Coleridge, Wordsworth, 1795–99 David Collings	57
5 Duty and mutiny: the aesthetics of loyalty and the representation of the British sailor c. 1798–1800 Geoff Quilley	80
6 Invasion! Coleridge, the defence of Britain and the cultivation of the public's fear Mark Rawlinson	110
7 War romances, historical analogies and Coleridge's Letters on the Spaniards Diego Saglia	138
8 'Of war and taking towns': Byron's siege poems Simon Bainbridge	161
9 Leigh Hunt and the aesthetics of post-war liberalism Philip Shaw	185
10 Marriage and the end of war Eric C. Walker	208
Index	227