

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction

I

CHAPTER ONE

Tōson, Literary History, and National Imagination

19

CHAPTER TWO

The Disease of Nationalism, the Empire of Hygiene:
The Broken Commandment as Hygiene Manual

47

CHAPTER THREE

Triangulating the Nation:
Representing and Publishing The Family

77

CHAPTER FOUR

Suicide and Childbirth in the I-Novel:
“Women’s Literature” in Spring and New Life

114

CHAPTER FIVE

The Times and Spaces of Nations:
The Multiple Chronotopes of Before the Dawn

154

EPILOGUE

The Most Japanese of Things

191

Notes 199

Works Cited 247

Index 265