
TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction	7
I: CHESTER HIMES's Cotton Comes to Harlem: Black Tough Guys in the Urban Ghetto	15
1: The Author: From Rebel to Expatriate	18
2: The Plot: The 'Maltese Falcon' Gambit	29
3: The Time Structure of Cotton Comes to Harlem	41
4: The Harlem Scenes of Action	44
5: The Poetic Evocation of 'Harlem'	54
6: The Detectives: Black Hard-Boiled Dicks	58
7: The Gallery of Criminals	78
8: Cotton: "It Was a Symbol"	82
II: HARRY KEMELMAN's Friday the Rabbi Slept Late: The Talmudist as Amateur Detective	91
1: The Author: From Story-Teller to Social Novelist	97
2: The Plot: Murder in Suburbia	104
3: The Cultural and Historical Background	113

4: The Time Structure of Friday the Rabbi Slept Late	129
5: The Places of Action	133
6: The Detective: A Conservative Rabbi	137
7: Talmudic Pilpul as a Means of Criminalistic Detection	155
8: Judaism and Ethnicity	164
III: TONY HILLERMAN's Listening Woman: A Navajo Detective on the Reservation	168
1: The Author: From Journalist to Novelist	172
2: The Plot: Chase, Capture, and Escape	182
3: The Cultural and Historical Background	191
4: The Time Structure of Listening Woman	204
5: The Places of Action	207
6: The Detective: A Navajo Tribal Policeman	216
7: Hozro , or the Harmony of the World	224
8: The Power of Witchcraft	228
9: Joe Leaphorn as a Cultural Mediator	231
10: Leaphorn's Criminal Antagonists	236
11: The Hero Twins of the Monsterway	238
12: Ethnic Heritage and the Detective Novel	242
Bibliography	246