

Contents

Foreword, A. Bartlett Giamatti	ix
Preface	xi
Charles T. Davis and the Critical Imperative in Afro-American Literature, Henry Louis Gates, Jr.	xiii
I. Theories of Black Literature and Culture
Black is the Color of the Cosmos (1970)	3
The American Scholar, the Black Arts, and/or Black Power (1969)	29
Black Literature and the Critic (1973)	49
Black Leadership as a Cultural Phenomenon: The Harlem Renaissance (1977)	63
II. The Structure of the Afro-American Literary Tradition
The Slave Narrative: First Major Art Form in an Emerging Black Tradition (1979)	83
Paul Laurence Dunbar (1980)	121
Prose Literature of Racial Defense, 1917-1924: A Preface to the Harlem Renaissance (1942)	167
On Nathan Irvin Huggins's Harlem Renaissance (1973)	233
Jean Toomer and the South: Region and Race as Elements within a Literary Imagination (1974)	235
Robert Hayden's Use of History (1973)	253
III. On Wright, Ellison, and Baldwin
Richard Wright: The Artist as Public Figure (1978)	271
From Experience to Eloquence: Richard Wright's Black Boy as Art (1979)	281
The Heavenly Voice of the Black American (1971)	299
The Mixed Heritage of the Modern Black Novel: Ralph Ellison and Friends (1979)	313

IV. A Bibliography of the Writings of Charles T. Davis	329
V. Appendix
Arthur P. Davis, "William Roscoe Davis and His Descendants" (1950)	335
Index	359