

Contents

Foreword	x
1 Introduction	1
Hygiene and health	2
Barriers and incentives to preventive practice	8
2 Prevalence and distribution of mental illness	15
Defining mental illness	17
Prevalence of mental illness	19
Community surveys: distribution of illness	23
Demographic factors and treatment	26
Demographic studies and aetiology	30
Conclusions	34
3 A Model for Prevention	36
A disease model	36
A health perspective	42
Focus of this book	46
What information is needed in order to prevent psychiatric disorders?	48
4 Causes of depression	52
Psychoanalytic theories	54
Psychological theories	56
Biological components	60
A psychosocial model of depression	62
A psychoevolutionary perspective	71
Social and psychological factors relating to vulnerability and onset: evidence	74

5	Origins of schizophrenia	90
	Genetic evidence	92
	Organic causes	93
	Psychological causes	95
	Psychosocial factors in the course of schizophrenic disorder	100
	A model of schizophrenia	104
6	Prevention in childhood	109
	Determinants of childhood disorder	110
	Does childhood disorder continue into adulthood?	122
	Modifying early childhood experience as a preventive intervention in adult disorder	126
7	Approaches to prevention: supporting troubled persons	134
	Events, psychological distress and psychiatric disorder	134
	Specific developmental vulnerability to disorder	139
	Event-producing situations	139
	Coping in event-producing situations	141
	Context and meaning	144
	Coping with the event and the distress	146
	Social support	149
	What kinds of intervention are suggested?	156
8	Approaches to prevention: macro-policies	163
	The work role	164
	Unemployment and mental illness	166
	Occupational stress	170
	The role of parent	172
	How can society reduce role stress?	173
	Conclusions	183
9	Preventive Interventions	185
	I Vulnerability-focused experimental intervention	187
	II Event-centred intervention	204
	Prevention within statutory services	212
	Conclusions	221
	Problems of defining benefits of interventions as preventive	222

10 The way forward	225
From theory to practice: some problems	225
From theory to practice: towards what kind of optimum practice does the research evidence point?	234
From theory to practice: some answers	238
Appendix	250
Examples from the research reported by Brown and Harris (1978) of the severe events and ongoing difficulties that brought about depression in vulnerable women in Camberwell
Bibliography	251
Index	269