Preface	xiii
Introduction	xv
Chapter 1. On Fallacies	1
1. Fallacious Arguments	1
2. The Concept of Argument	2
3. Deductive Arguments	3
4. Beliefs	4
5. Epistemic Logic	5
6. Probabilistic Models	6
7. Dialectical Precepts	8
Chapter 2. Argumentum ad Verecundiam	11
1. Arguments from Expertise	11
2. Stochastic Explanation	14
3. The Logical Structure of the Ad Verecundiam	15
4. Adequacy Conditions	17
5. The Analysis Elaborated	21
6. Dialectic	25
7. Privileged Access and Expertise	26
8. Infallibility	27
Chapter 3. Petitio Principii	29
1. Equivalence and Dependency Conditions	29
2. The Disjunctive Syllogism	32
3. Immediate Inference	35
4. Universal Arguments	39
5. Circular Definition	42
6. Effectiveness and Soundness	43

Chapter 4. Ad Baculum	47
1. The Statement Requirement	47
2. Prudential Inference	48
3. Ad Baculum as Equivocation	50
4. Threats and Beliefs	52
5. Conclusions	53
Chapter 5. Ad Hominem	55
1. The Lockean View	55
2. The Standard View	57
3. The Circumstantial Ad Hominem	58
4. Logical Inconsistency	59
5. Assertional Inconsistency	62
6. Praxiological Inconsistency	63
7. Deontic-Praxiological Inconsistency	63
8. The Abusive Ad Hominem	65
9. Expertise	65
10. Nexpertise	66
11. Cranks and Crackpots	70
12. Some Further Interconnections	71
13. Concluding Remarks	72
Chapter 6. Petitio and Relevant Many-Premised Arguments	75
1. Petitio Principii	75
2. Mill: The Syllogism as Petitio	77
3. De Morgan's Rejoinder	78
4. Relevant Arguments	80
5. Disjunctive Syllogism	81
6. Conjunctive Conclusions	83
7. Concluding Remarks	85
Chapter 7. Ad Hominem , Contra Gerber	87
1. Desiderata	87
2. Neutral and Abusive Terms	88
3. Laudatory Ad Hominem	89
4. Lockean Ad Hominem	90
5. Concluding Remarks	91

Chapter 8. Composition and Division	93
1. The Mediaeval View	93
2. The Modern View	97
3. The Two Views Juxtaposed	99
4. The Basis of the Fallacy: Aggregates	101
5. Analysis of the Fallacy	110
6. The Cause of the Fallacy	113
7. Importance of these Fallacies	115
8. Concluding Remarks	117
Appendix A	119
Appendix B	119
Chapter 9. Post Hoc, Ergo Propter Hoc	121
1. The Problem	121
2. Basic Characteristics of Causation	121
3. Structure of Post Hoc Arguments	129
4. Seven Post Hoc Fallacies	132
5. Completeness	138
6. Correct and Incorrect Causal Arguments	139
Chapter 10. Arresting Circles in Formal Dialogues	143
1. Background	143
2. The Game H	144
3. Circle Games	147
4. Adequacy of $H+(W)+(RI)$ for Representing the Petition	149
5. Cumulativeness	153
6. Groundedness	155
7. A Linear Simplification	157
8. Concluding Remarks	158
Chapter 11. The Fallacy of Ad Ignorantiam	161
1. Find the Fallacy	162
2. Confirmation: Dis and Un	163
3. A Fallacy of Confirmation	164
4. An Epistemic Fallacy	165
5. A Dialectical Fallacy	166
6. The Analysis	167
7. Presumptions	168

8. Testability	169
9. Addendum	170
Chapter 12. Circular Demonstration and Von Wright-Geach Entailment	175
1. Circularity Conditions	175
2. The Von Wright-Geach Definition	176
3. Revising the Definition	177
4. Refinements	178
Chapter 13. Laws of Thought and Epistemic Proofs	181
1. Moorean Proof	182
2. Epistemic Assumptions	183
3. Non-Classical Connectives	184
4. Indirect Proof	187
5. Circular Proofs	188
6. Conclusions	190
Chapter 14. What Type of Argument is an Ad Verecundiam?	191
1. Type of Argument	191
2. Two Characteristics	192
3. Neither Inductive Nor Deductive	192
4. Plausible Argument	193
Chapter 15. Equivocation and Practical Logic	195
1. The Nature of the Problem	196
2. Contextual Shift	198
3. Varieties of Equivocation	200
4. Gross and Subtle Equivocations	203
5. Hamblin: More Problems about Meaning	203
6. Argumentation in Natural Languages	205
7. Concluding Remarks	207

Chapter 16. Why is the Ad Populum a Fallacy?	209
1. Arguments Directed to Specific Recipients	210
2. Ad Populum as an Emotive Fallacy	213
3. Is it an Argument at All?	214
4. Is it a Single Fallacy?	217
Chapter 17. What is Informal Logic?	221
1. Applicability of Formal Methods	221
2. Contextual Peculiarities	224
3. Fallacies	227
4. Illustration of Using Formal Theories: The Fallacy of Composition and Division	228
Chapter 18. The Fallacy of Many Questions	233
1. Semantic Preliminaries	234
2. Three Major Methods	235
3. A Pragmatic Approach	241
4. Epistemic Settings	242
5. Loaded and Multiple Questions	244
6. Concluding Remarks	249
Chapter 19. Question-Begging and Cumulativeness in Dialectical Games	253
1. The Hamblin Game (H)	254
2. Rescher Dialectics	259
3. The Mackenzie Game DC	261
4. Begging the Question in DD	267
5. Organizing retractions of commitments	269
