

Contents

Acknowledgements	vii
Notes on the Contributors	viii
1 Introduction Wendy S. Jacobson	1
2 Spirit and the Allegorical Child: Little Nell's Mortal Aesthetic John Bowen	13
3 Dickens and the Construction of the Child James R. Kincaid	29
4 Suppressing Narratives: Childhood and Empire in The Uncommercial Traveller and Great Expectations Grahame Smith	43
5 The Imperial Child: Bella, Our Mutual Friend , and the Victorian Picturesque Murray Baumgarten	54
6 Dickens and 'Gold Rush Fever': Colonial Contagion in Household Words Lillian Nayder	67
7 Floating Signifiers of Britishness in the Novels of the Anti-Slave-Trade Squadron Catherine Gallagher	78
8 Dickens and the Native American Kate Flint	94
9 Nationalism and Violence: America in Charles Dickens's Martin Chuzzlewit Robert E. Lougy	105
10 Girls Underground, Boys Overseas: Some Graveyard Vignettes Catherine Robson	116

11	'What the waves were always saying': Dombey and Son and Textual Ripples on an African Shore Malvern van Wyk Smith	128
12	Savages and Settlers in Dickens: Reading Multiple Centres Anthony Chennells	153
13	Dickens in Africa: 'Africanizing' Hard Times Greenwell Matsika	173
14	Primitive and Wingless: the Colonial Subject as Child Bill Ashcroft	184
	Index	203