

Contents

Series Editor's Preface	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii
Introduction	I
I: Contexts
Contextual Overview	5
Chronology	11
Contemporary Documents	18
The English and the British Empire	18
Forster, 'Notes on the English Character' (1920)	18
Forster, 'Liberty in England' (1935)	18
Forster, 'Reflections on India' (1922)	19
Forster, 'Our Diversions: The Birth of an Empire' (1924)	19
On A Passage to India	21
Forster, The Hill of Devi (1953)	21
Forster, letter to Syed Ross Masood (1922)	22
Forster, letter to J. R. Ackerley (1924)	22
Forster, letter to G. L. Dickinson (1924)	22
Forster, letter to William Plomer (1934)	22
Forster, 'Three Countries' (1983)	22
Forster, interview with P. N. Furbank and F. J. H. Haskell (1952)	23
Forster, 'Call Me a Non-Believer' Interview with G. K. Das (1977)	23

India	25
Forster, 'Syed Ross Masood' (1937)	25
Forster, extract from broadcast talk 'India Again' (1946)	27
Forster, The Hill of Devi (1953)	30
On Rhythm in Fiction	32
Forster, Aspects of the Novel (1927)	32
2: Interpretations
Critical History	37
Early Critical Reception	49
Rose Macaulay, 'Women in the East' (1924)	49
Leonard Woolf, 'Arch beyond Arch' (1924)	51
H. W. Massingham, 'The Price of India's Friendship' (1924)	53
Bhupal Singh, 'Forster's Picture of India' (1934)	56
Modern Criticism	59
Nirad Chaudhuri, 'Passage To and From India' (1954)	59
G. K. Das, 'Through the Ruins of Empire' (1977)	64
Jenny Sharpe, 'The Indeterminacies of Rape' (1993)	75
Bette London, 'On Mimicry: Towards a Performative Theory of Colonial Authority' (1994)	83
David Dowling, 'Forster's Novels' (1985)	90
Charu Malik, 'To Express the Subject of Friendship: Masculine Desire and Colonialism in A Passage to India ' (1997)	101
The Work in Performance	107
3: Key passages
Introduction	113
Key Passages of A Passage to India	115

4: Further reading

Recommended Editions and Further Reading 161

Index 165