

Contents

FOREWORD From the first to the second edition, spring 1991 - autumn 2001	10
INTRODUCTION The blades of Mycenaean swords and the persistence of hallowed place names	15
CHAPTER I The Axenos Pontus	17-51
The Axenos Pontus of the Labours 28 ~ Myths, topography and archaeological evidence 34 ~ North of Cape Kaliakra 49
CHAPTER II The Propontis or the Sea of Marmara	53-74
Byzantion-Constantinople: topography of the environs	66
Constantinople: the dual-natured City of Constantine the Great 73
CHAPTER III The Polyonymous Thracian Bosphoros	75-81
CHAPTER IV The Euxine Pontus	83-314
The River Danube: the ultimate frontier	93
Sacred Istros and distant Istria 102
From the Istros-Danube to the Bosphoros	109
Travelling along the Euxine horizon of the Thracian shore 112 ~ Exhausted cities, perished materials, enduring memory: Apollonia-Sozopolis and Mesembria 124 ~ Anchiale, Anchialos and Achelo: a city burnt to cinders 146 ~ Penetration of the heartland of Thrace and the early Hellenization of the ancient Thracians 148 ~ Alexander the Great on the Danube 151 ~ Ionian Tomis, Byzantine Constantia-Constantiniana (modern Constantza) 157 ~ The Early Byzantine Dioecesis Thraciae 163 ~ The Byzantine border and the defence of the Black Sea end of the Danube 164
The dark ages	166
And Scythia Minor? 172 ~ The Byzantines return to the Danube 173
From the Danube Delta to the Greater Caucasus: the Euxine North	176
In the nameless and much-traversed wilderness of the Scythian steppe 179 ~ Olbia, the most fortunate city of the North 195 ~ The Crimean Peninsula 211 ~ The Cimmerian Bosphoros, Pantikapaion and Bosporian 'polynesia': the Straits of Kerch 216 ~ The Sea of Azov 224 ~ Byzantine Cherson 231
The mountain walls of the Euxine South: Pontos	243
One hundred generations in Pontos and three generations of refugees 247 ~ Trapezous 253 ~ Saint Theodoros Gabras 263 ~ The Empire of the Grand Komnenoi of Trebizond: 1203/4-1461 264
The Euxine Far East: Caucasia	284
OTAR LORDKIPANIDZE, The Greeks in Colchis	288
The Kingdom of Pontos or the Kingdom of the Mithridates 296 ~ The Romans in Colchis 297 ~ Orthodox Georgia: a staunch friend 299
ALEXANDER ALEXIDZE, Martha-Maria: An outstanding personality in the cultural history of Georgia and Byzantium	306

CHAPTER V The Black Sea (1453-1829)	315-370
Constantinople 319 ~ Wallachia and Moldavia 330 ~ 'Byzance après Byzance' 331 ~ From the Moldavian Plain to the Pontic Alps 335
ANNA BALLIAN, Argyroupolis - Gümüşhane (translated by John Leatham)	339
Expatriation 350 ~ Like migratory birds 359 ~ Josipos's 'Greece' and Smaragda's 'Home- land' 365 ~ Superbia Graecorum and the Greek Idea, Russian Expansion and the Tsarina's 'Euxine Pontus' dream 367
CHAPTER VI The Golden Fleece	371-418
The Eastern Question and Tanzimat (1839-1878), population changes and demographic realign- ments 382 ~ The blossoming of Black Sea Hellenism 386 ~ Parish and guild organization 387
LOUISA POLYCHRONIDOU-LOUKOPOULOU, Antiquities and archaeology in the Thracian seaboard of the Propontis (translated by John Leatham)	396
Greek Education under the aegis, leadership and supervision of the Ecumenical Patriarchate 399 ~ The last splendour of the Euxine Sea world 407 ~ The Russian Governorate of Kars (1878- 1918) and the 75,000 Pontian 'Karlıdes' 410 ~ The Inhospitable Sea: Axenos Pontus 412
APPENDIX I
PETROS N. PROTONOTARIOS, The Mint of the Empire of Trebizond	420
APPENDIX II
Danubian Braila (translated by Kay Cicellis)	427
FOREWORD TO THE FIRST EDITION (1991)	436
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	438
INDEX OF MAPS	440
BIBLIOGRAPHY AND NOTES (translated by Caroline Robinson)	441
INDEX (translated by Caroline Robinson)	465

Map 1, pp. 8-9. The Euxine Pontus and the Maiotis (Sea of Azov). Marked also is the island of 'Achilles, or Leuce, the existence of which is doubtful', according to the compiler of 1781.