

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Acknowledgements . . . . .	IX
Introduction . . . . .	1
I. The Critic and The Nature of Reality . . . . .	8
1. Subject and Object and the Nature of Reality . . . . .	8
2. Art and Reality: Method and Pattern . . . . .	9
3. Past and Present: A Survey of English Literature . . . . .	12
4. The Elizabethans: The Outward Show . . . . .	14
5. The Jacobeans: The Search Within . . . . .	16
6. The Restoration: The Surface Vision . . . . .	18
7. The Eighteenth Century: Light and Order . . . . .	20
8. The Nineteenth Century: Genius, Idealism, and the Victorian Del- uge . . . . .	22
9. The Modern Consciousness: The Presentness of the Present . . . . .	27
II. The Novelist as Critic . . . . .	36
1. Introduction . . . . .	36
2. The Novel and the New Reality . . . . .	36
3. Phases of Fiction . . . . .	48
4. Poetry, Fiction, and the Future . . . . .	60
5. The Feminist Approach . . . . .	66
6. Postscript . . . . .	70
III. The Critic as Critic . . . . .	85
1. The Critic as Reader . . . . .	85
2. Significant Form . . . . .	88
3. Criticism and Creativity . . . . .	91
4. The Critic as Reviewer . . . . .	93
5. The Critic as Contemporary . . . . .	98
IV. Conclusion . . . . .	104
1. The Critic as Critic . . . . .	104
2. The Function of Criticism . . . . .	104
3. Form and Feeling . . . . .	108
4. The Artist-Critic . . . . .	113
5. New Directions and Disillusionment . . . . .	117
Bibliography . . . . .	127
Index . . . . .	135