

Contents

Editors' preface	vii
Acknowledgements	viii
Foreword	ix
1 The idea of industrialism	1
2 The rise of industrialism	11
Theories about industrialism as it emerged	20
The idea of stages of development	21
Other factors discussed by Saint-Simon and Comte	24
Industrialisation as an evolutionary process	25
Differentiation, integration and the division of social labour	28
Marx: money, world markets, class and technology	31
Weber: religion, individualism, rationality and bureaucracy	35
Summary	38
3 Contemporary approaches to industrialism	40
Pattern variables: the neo-evolutionary approach	41
Differentiation and integration	46
An economic developmental sequence	49
The internal logic of industrialism and the convergence hypothesis	54
The idea of industrial society	61
Summary	62

CONTENTS

4	Industrialism and the individual	63
	Factories and bureaucracies, work and ideologies	64
	Family and standard of living	72
	Education and stratification	74
	The market system	76
	The individual in industrial society	78
5	The process of development	80
	Some development theorists: Hoselitz and McClelland	80
	The Marxist critique: Frank	86
	The possibility of a new synthesis	90
	Development and industrialism	100
6	Industrialism surveyed	102
	Complexity of the problem	102
	Conflict and growth	103
	Should we continue to use the term 'industrialism'?	105
	What precisely is 'industrialism'?	107
	Varieties of industrialism	109
	Limits to the variety of industrialism	113
	References and further reading	116
	Index	121