

Contents

I. Introduction	1
II. Theorising the Body	7
1. Mind-Body Dualism	7
2. The Body in Marxism, Feminism and Phenomenology	10
3. Michel Foucault: Discourse, Power and the Body	13
3.1 The Body in Discipline and Punish and The History of Sexuality	13
3.2 A Critique of Foucault's Notion of the Body	16
3.2.1 Resistance, Ethics and the Body	16
3.2.2 Power, Sexuality and the Materiality of the Body	20
4. Judith Butler: the Body in Gender Trouble and Bodies that Matter	23
4.1 Deconstructing the Body	23
4.2 Against Disembodiment: Towards a Critique of Butler	25
5. The Body in the Age of Late Capitalism	31
5.1 Repression and the Cult of the Body in Consumer Culture	31
5.2 Bodies on Display: the Commodification of the Body	34
6. Bodily Boundaries and Monstrosity	36
III. Desire, Appetite and Power: the Body in The Infernal Desire Machines of Dr Hoffman	41
1. The Body as Meat: Cannibalism in The Infernal Desire Machines	42
1.1 Cannibalism and Melancholia: Unity, Loss and Desire	44
1.1.1 Cannibalism and the Desire for Unity	44
1.1.2 The Divided Subject: Melancholia, Mortality and the Loss of Appetite	49

1.1.2.1	Death, Desire and the Divided Self	49
1.1.2.2	Melancholia and Maternity	50
1.1.2.3	The Womb and the Flight from Historicity	52
1.2	Variations of the Totem Meal: the River People and the Centaurs	54
1.2.1	Masochism and the Repression of the Body	54
1.2.2	Cannibalism and Sacrificial Violence	57
1.3	The Count: Cannibalism and Sadistic Violence	62
1.3.1	Cannibalism as Psychoanalytic Metaphor	62
1.3.2	Cannibalism as Economic Metaphor	64
1.4	Conclusion	67
2.	The Body as Text: Desire in The Infernal Desire Machines	71
2.1	Theorising Desire	71
2.1.1	Desire and Repression: Marcuse, Brown and Reich	71
2.1.2	Desire as Production: Deleuze/Guattari, Foucault and Butler	74
2.2	The Peep-Show: Discourse, Power and Desire	79
2.2.1	The Samples: the Discursive Production of Desire	79
2.2.2	The Peep-Show as Cinematographic Apparatus	82
2.2.3	The Peep-Show as Speculum: the Absence of Woman	84
2.2.3.1	The Cave, the Cinema and the Mirror	84
2.2.3.2	The Gender Politics of The Infernal Desire Machines	88
2.2.4	The Peep-Show and Cinema's Unconscious: Deconstructing the Male Imaginary	90
2.2.4.1	Scopophilia, Fetishism and Sadism	90
2.2.4.2	Desire as Construction	92
2.3	Transcending Time and the Body: Memory and Writing	96
2.4	Conclusion	99

IV. Confinement and Metamorphosis: the Body in The Passion of New Eve	107
1. The Subjection of the Body in The Passion of New Eve	107
1.1 The Mirror and the Screen: the Body as Construction	108
1.1.1 Leilah: Reflections in the Mirror	108
1.1.2 Tristessa: Hollywood and the Gaze	109
1.1.3 “Passing for a Woman”: the Social Construction of Femininity	110
1.2. Tristessa and Leilah: a Genealogy of the Angel and the Whore	112
1.2.1 Suffering Incarnate: Justine, Marilyn Monroe and Tristessa	112
1.2.2 The Insatiable Body: Prostitution and Pornography	114
1.2.2.1 Pornography and the Soulless Body	114
1.2.2.2 Rehabilitating the Whore	115
1.3 The Body of the City, Death and Abjection	117
1.3.1 The Open Body: Disease, Decay and Dissolution	117
1.3.2 Snow White or: ‘the Death of a Beautiful Woman’	119
1.4 Inverting Patriarchy: Mother, Myth and Technology	121
2. Sex Changes: Metamorphosis of the Body in The Passion of New Eve	126
2.1 Subversive Bodies I: the Transvestite	126
2.1.1 Tristessa, Gilda and the Femme Fatale	126
2.1.2 Transvestism and Narcissism: ‘the Rule of the One’	129
2.1.3 The Transvestite in Carter’s Later Fiction	130
2.1.4 Transgressive Bodies in Postmodernity	132
2.2 The Mock Wedding: Violence and Transgression	133
2.2.1 Bakhtin and Butler: Drag and the Carnavalesque	134
2.2.2 Sadism and Destruction	136
2.2.3 Sacrificial Violence	138

2.3 Subversive Bodies II: the Transsexual, the Hermaphrodite and the Body in Process	140
2.3.1 The Transsexual and the Hermaphrodite: the Love Scene in The Passion of New Eve	140
2.3.2 The Children's Militia and the Body in History	145
3. Conclusion	146
V. Alterity, Femininity and the Monstrous Body in Nights at the Circus	151
1. Fevvers' Body	151
1.1 The English Angel: Myth in the Mode of Irony	151
1.2 Utopia - or: Wings as a Symbol of Liberation	154
2. The Grotesque Body	157
2.1 Transformation and Regeneration	157
2.2 The Clowns: Violence and Stasis	159
3. 'To Repeat with a Difference': Masquerade, Parody and the Spectacle	160
3.1 "The freedom behind the mask": Masquerade as Subversion	160
3.2 The Faceless Clown: Masquerade and the Horror of the Void	162
4. The Panopticon: Confinement and Liberation	165
4.1 The Body as the Object of the Gaze	165
4.2 Inverting the Gaze: the Body as Site of Subversion	171
5. Monstrous Bodies, Monstrous Texts	174
6. The Emergence of Alterity in Carter's Late Fiction	178
7. Conclusion	182

VI. The ‘Lived Body’: Age, Death and Maternity in Wise Children	189
1. The Maternal Body in Carter’s Fiction	190
1.1 Feminism and Maternity in the 1970s	190
1.2 “As I am, so you will be”: Matrophobia in Carter’s Early Fiction	195
1.2.1 Raging Against the Mother: Matricide and Maternal Violence	195
1.2.2 Somatophobia and the Pregnant Body	198
1.3 Maternity in Wise Children	200
1.3.1 Beyond the Oedipal Triangle: Bard House and Grandma’s Invented Family	200
1.3.2 Towards a Female Genealogy: Mothering as Performative Ethics of Care	203
1.3.3 “The Quilt Maker”: Recovering a Female Tradition	208
1.3.4 Family Romances: Maternity and Paternity as Social Fiction	210
1.4 The Return to the Maternal in Carter’s Late Fiction	212
2. Laughter in the Face of Death: the Ageing Body in Wise Children	215
2.1 Laughter, Death and Resurrection: Theories of the Comic	216
2.1.1 Comedy and the Return of the Body	216
2.1.2 The Comic and Death	221
2.2 Transcending Death and Resurrecting the Body: Carnavalesque Laughter in Wise Children	222
2.3 Laughter as Mask of Pain: Catastrophic Laughter in Wise Children	225
2.4 Comedy, Death and the Return of the Repressed: the Double in Wise Children	227
2.4.1 Family Resemblance: Duality and Continuity in Wise Children	229

2.4.2 The Double, Death and Deconstruction	230
2.4.3 Deconstructing Boundaries: the Pharmakos, the Clown and the Bastard	232
2.4.4 Versions of the Self: Photography and Mirror Images in Wise Children	234
2.4.4.1 The Double in the Mirror	234
2.4.4.2 The Double and the World of the Simulacrum	235
2.5 The Sense of an Ending and the Death of Narrative	238
2.5.1 Transcending Death through Storytelling	238
2.5.2 Change and Repetition: Ending on a New Beginning	243
3. Conclusion	245
VII. Conclusion	249
Bibliography	255