

Contents

Abbreviations sometimes used in the Text	xi
Foreword to the Second Edition	1
Section 1: Introduction	7
Part One: Linguistic Philosophy in its Diverse Forms
Section II: The target-area reconnoitred and defined	17
Section III: Professor Ayer's former practice of a priori linguistics, and how to rid Empiricism of "the" Verification Principle	30
Section IV: Important ambiguities in Professor Ryle's The Concept of Mind	46
Section V: Ryle's practice of a priori and/or legislative linguistics	59
Section VI: Ryle's misuse of "category-mistake"	72
Section VII: Professor Austin's contributions to Linguistics	82
Section VIII: The use of "concept" in linguistic philosophy	82
Section IX: The misuses of "logic" in linguistic philosophy and a warning about "criterion"	112
Section X: How much linguistic philosophy is Anglo -linguistics?	122
Section XI: Mr. Warnock's way of defending linguistic philosophy and Professor Strawson's way of doing it	135

Part Two:

Ludwig Wittgenstein, the Instigator of the Revolution in Philosophy

Section XII: The rôles of G. E. Moore and Wittgenstein compared	153
Section XIII: Wittgenstein's Tractatus , the purest kind of a priori linguistics	165
Section XIV: Wittgenstein's later accounts of language and of philosophy	183
Section XV: Wittgenstein's peculiar ways of practising his new kind of philosophy	197
Section XVI: Some answers to important questions raised by Wittgenstein	215
Section XVII: Wittgenstein's legacy	234
Second thoughts – an epilogue after ten years
Some Criticisms by Others	253
Some Criticisms by the Author
(a) Verificationism	257
(b) Ryle's Programme	262
(c) Strawson's Argumentation	264
(d) The Private Language Argument	268
The Argument from Analogy	271
Index	279