

Table of contents

Foreword	VII
Language contact and change in the Americas: The state of the art Sarah G. Thomason	1
Part I North America: California
Yuki, Pomoan, Wintun, and Athabaskan: Language Contact in Round Valley, California Uldis Balodis	17
The role of passives in the formation of hierarchical systems in Northern California Carmen Jany	33
Assessing the effects of language contact on Northeastern Pomo N. Alexander Walker	67
Synchronic and diachronic accounts of phonological features in Central Chumash languages Timothy P. Henry	91
Part II North America: Athabaskan, Iroquoian, and Uto-Aztecan
Contact and semantic shift in extreme language endangerment: Ahtna riverine directionals in a cardinal world Andrea L. Berez-Kroeker	107
“Excorporation” in a Dene (Athabaskan) language Keren Rice	139
Contact and change in Oneida Clifford Abbott	167
Huron/Wendat interactions with the Seneca language Megan Lukaniec & Wallace Chafe	189
The usual suspects: Multiple grammaticalization of ‘do’, ‘be’, ‘have’, and ‘go’ in Ute T. Givón	219

Part III Northern Mexico, Mesoamerica, and South America

Language documentation and historical linguistics	249
Lyle Campbell
The Jakalteq Popti' noun classifier system: Changes due to Spanish contact	273
Colette Grinevald
Language contact and word structure: A case study from north-west Amazonia	297
Alexandra Y. Aikhenvald
Auxiliation and typological shift: The interaction of language contact and internally-motivated change in Quechua	315
Daniel J. Hintz
Discourse pattern replication in South Conchucos Quechua and Andean Spanish	339
Diane M. Hintz

Part IV The Americas and beyond

Measuring language typicality, with special reference to the Americas	365
Bernard Comrie
Words for 'dog' as a diagnostic of language contact in the Americas	385
Matthias Pache, Søren Wichmann, & Mikhail Zhivlov
Index	411