

Visions of empire

PATRIOTISM, POPULAR CULTURE AND
THE CITY, 1870-1939

Brad Beaven

MANCHESTER UNIVERSITY PRESS

CONTENTS

List of illustrations — ix

List of tables — x

Acknowledgements — xi

General editor's introduction — xii

Introduction	page 1
1 Cities in context: civic culture, 'New Journalism' and the creation of localised imperial identities, 1870–1939	12
2 The city and the imperial mission, 1850–1914	42
3 Civic ceremony and the citizen-soldier during the Boer War, 1899–1902	70
4 Fragmenting communities: patriotism, empire and the First World War	92
5 Educating the future citizens of empire: working-class schooling, 1870–1939	125
6 Transmitting the imperial message: Empire Day and the 1924 Wembley Exhibition	150
7 Mass entertainment, popular culture and imperial societies, 1870–1939	179
Conclusion	208

Appendix One: Principal newspapers in Portsmouth, Coventry and Leeds, c. 1800–1940 — 211

Appendix Two: A sample of theatre, music hall and cinema entertainment in Portsmouth, Coventry and Leeds, 1870–1939 — 212

References — 219

Index — 231