

The Poetics of Conflict Experience

Materiality and Embodiment in Second World War Italy

Sarah De Nardi

Contents

List of figures	xii
Disclaimer	xiv
Acknowledgements	xv
Introduction: a poetics of civil war and resistance	1
Baldini dies in the end: journey through a world at war	1
Armchair strategists vs. affective archives	10
The materialities of absence	14
The interview process	16
1 8 September 1943, ‘end of days’: Italy’s capitulation and its dystopian aftermath	18
1.1 My family history as a story of the resistance	21
1.2 The genesis of civil war and German occupation	24
1.3 Materiality and memory	33
1.4 The poetics of storytelling: interviewing, imagining, mapping	36
2 Unsettling identities	40
1944	41
2.1 Identities and the uneasy materiality of conflict	43
2.2 Materialities and the uncanny	44
2.3 The partisan experience	47
2.4 Understanding the Fascists	48
2.5 Who were the Germans, and what did they want?	51
2.5.1 Germans . . . or Austrians?	51
2.5.2 German self-reflections	57
2.6 Why weren’t the Allies more helpful?	59
2.7 Spies: the ultimate uncanny element	62

3	The lost bodies of the Italian resistance and civil war	66
3.1	Bodies in the snow	66
3.2	The body of the fighter	70
3.2.1	Sex	71
3.2.2	Bodily hygiene	73
3.3	The female body	75
3.4	The Jewish body in the resistance	80
3.5	Other bodies	83
3.6	Saved or dead: the body's tale	85
3.7	Reconnaissance in no man's memory: the grim legend of Buss de la Lum	87
4	The haunting materiality of storytelling	93
4.1	Storying affects: wartime rumour as inter-corporeal practice	93
4.2	The ontogenetic nature of storytelling: the snowball effect	98
4.3	Action! The historical workings of affect	101
4.4	Story one: constructing an American OSS agent as the Other	107
4.5	Story two: the Golden Column of Menarè	109
4.6	Story three: expected and unexpected emotions	111
4.7	Conclusion	113
5	Competing materialities: presence and absence in the material world of the war	116
5.1	The material turn in the social sciences: things 'matter'	116
5.2	The materiality of the interview	122
5.3	Wartime tangibilities: on emotional absence-presence	123
5.4	Frontline materialities: evocative objects and booby traps	126
5.4.1	The eagle and the death cult: Fascists and their materiality	126
5.4.2	Frontline objects	129
5.5	Absence as an affect: the shadow-play of memory	130
5.5.1	A paper cenotaph: Bruno's memento	131
5.5.2	The night is a thing: the poetics of sleep and sleep deprivation	134
5.5.3	'I shouldn't have asked them for it'. Wilma's guilty prize	135
5.6	Reflections	137
6	Landscapes of fighting, feeling and hoping: place as material culture	139
6.1	Hostile landscapes and the vernacular of terror	139
6.2	The making of places: opportunity and consolation	143

6.3	The unmaking of places	149
6.3.1	Home, falling apart	151
6.3.2	The unlikely comfort of the uplands	155
6.4	Searching for invisibility: stealth and secrecy in everyday materialities	156
6.5	The marginality of bodies, the liminality of the river	159
6.6	Going back	160
7	The conclusion of a journey through regions of silence	163
	By way of foreword	163
7.1	Compassionate scholarship: using affect and postmemory towards a recognition of the uncanniness of civil war	164
7.1.1	An intermission: Levi, the partisan	165
7.2	Making place for a future	166
7.3	Engaging with the poetics of conflict experience	170
7.3.1	The poetics of violence	170
7.3.2	The poetics of exclusion	174
7.4	A past we can know	177
7.5	Engaging humanely with the materialities of others	179
	Appendix	183
	Bibliography	190
	Index	205