

Contents to Volume I

Acknowledgements	xii
Glossary	xiii
INTRODUCTION	xv
PART I: THE LIMITS OF THE WILL
1 The logical limits of the will	1
1 Introduction	1
2 Pragmatic limits	2
3 Non-phenomenal logical limits	3
4 Distinguishing 'the willing of' from 'the willed'	6
5 Necessarily, all sensations are not willings	8
6 A universal limit upon the extension of the will	15
7 The unwillability of belief	21
8 The unwillability of willing	29
9 The unwillability of striving	35
2 Is the body the final boundary of the will?	37
1 Metaphysical limits	37
2 Learning the use of natural-kind words	39
3 Misusing natural-kind words	43
4 Extending the will beyond the body (1): the problem	48
5 Extending the will beyond the body (2): the diagnosis	54
3 Extending the will beyond the body	61
1 Attempting to explain 'I can will extra-bodily events'	61
2 An extensionalist test for radical volitionism	69
3 Why prefer the volitionist's novel usage of active terms?	74
4 A summary review of the state of play	87
5 Building up the concept of a physical action (1): the control and knowledge factors	90
6 Building up the concept of a physical action (2): the knowledge factor	95
7 Building up the concept of a physical action (3): the means-ends and feeling-awareness factors	100

4 Magic versus mechanism in action	106
1 Is it a metaphysical fact that I can move my arm?	106
2 A preliminary speech-pragmatic clash between action and mechanism	110
3 A dialectical synthesis of the concepts of act and mechanism	113
4 Interiorist denials of the problem	120
5 A summary account (1)	124
6 A summary account (2)	131
7 The required non-metaphysical extension of the will beyond the body	133
PART II: THE IMMEDIATE OBJECT OF THE WILL
INTRODUCTION	135
5 The given	143
1 Introduction	143
2 The conditions of action	144
3 Kinaesthetic and postural sensations	150
4 The given: a unitary whole	164
6 The location of sensation	167
1 A theory of sense perception	168
2 The actual physical location of sensations	174
3 Projection and psychological space	178
4 Attempting to state the criteria and sense of 'place of a sensation'	181
5 Causal considerations	187
6 Sense fields and seemings	197
7 A brief résumé of Chapters 5 and 6	202
7 The body-image	211
1 The unconscious mythology of the body-image	211
2 Comparing 'body sense' and sense perception	215
3 The most extreme interiorist theory of bodily willing	228
4 The body-image	229
5 Short- and long-term body-image	241
6 Conclusion	248
Index	251