

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	VII
I. THE PROBLEM OF MORAL KNOWLEDGE	1
1. Contemporary sources of moral skepticism	2
2. Hume and the deductive fallacy	3
3. The meaning of moral obligation	7
4. The criteria of knowledge	10
5. Plan of the book	12
II. DUTY AND GOODNESS
1. Types of theory	14
2. The deontologists' critique of utilitarianism	16
3. Intuitionistic utilitarianism as a theory of moral knowledge	18
4. The identification of goodness and duty	21
5. The "ought-to-be" argument	22
6. The deductive argument—a restatement	24
7. The appeal to self-evidence	28
8. Reductionistic utilitarianism	29
9. Moral goodness and duty	33
10. Duty and goodness and the "ought" and the "is"	37
III. DUTY AND RIGHTNESS
1. The intuitionism of the deontologists	40
2. Prichard's "unreasonable" theory	42
3. The self-evidence of our duties	44
4. The duty to keep promises	47
5. Intuition and generalization	54
6. Rightness and duty	56
7. From rightness to duty	58
IV. A NEW POINT OF VIEW
1. Oxford philosophy	60
2. The revolution in philosophy	61

3. Wittgenstein	64
4. Analysis and moral philosophy	68
5. Analysis and the problem of moral knowledge	71
V. DUTY AND ORDINARY LANGUAGE
1. An interpretation of Toulmin's conclusions	77
2. A reinterpretation of Toulmin's conclusions	79
3. Good reasons and generally accepted reasons	83
4. Toulmin's theory and the deductive fallacy	85
5. Does Toulmin escape the deductive fallacy?	90
6. Summary comments on Toulmin's moral theory	96
7. Nowell-Smith and the problem of moral knowledge	97
8. Wittgenstein and the revolution in philosophy	103
VI. A RETURN TO INTUITIONISM
1. The deductive fallacy, skepticism, and intuitionism	107
2. A defense of intuitionism	109
3. Knowledge and a plurality of intuitions	114
4. Intuitive self-evidence and moral knowledge	117
VII. REASON AND DUTY
1. Two notions of self-evidence	122
2. Preliminary objections	124
3. Duty and good reasons	131
4. A moral axiom	134
5. A story	139
6. Elaboration and comments	140
7. The principle of personal impartiality	147
8. Egoism and morality	150
9. The deductive fallacy	152
VIII. TOWARD A GENERAL THEORY OF MORALITY
1. Outline of a positive theory of obligation	156
2. Practical qualifications	160
3. Morality and utility	165
4. Goodness and the naturalistic fallacy	166
Index	171